

$433,408 Failure Follows Charges Of White Slavery

H. W. Cook, Former Banker and Former Mayor of Fairburn, Files Bankruptcy Petition Here.

COOK IS NOW FACED BY THREE CHARGES

Alleged Kidnaping of Agnes Purmort Results in Action by State and by Federal Courts.

Voluntary petition in bankruptcy, filed in federal district court here Monday, listing his liabilities at $433,408.22 and his total assets at $13,100, marked the latest development in the sensational case of H. W. Cook, 57, of Fairburn, prominent Campbell county land owner, banker and former mayor of Fairburn, who now faces state charges of kidnaping, and irregularity of banking activities, and a federal charge of alleged violation of the Mann white slave act.

In the bankruptcy petition filed by Cook's attorneys, 37 different creditors are listed, with accounts set forth against him ranging from $8.60 to $170.00.

Make Trip to West.

The case of the Fairburn banker first came into prominence when Agnes Purmort, 17-year-old daughter of one of Cook's tenants, according to the girl's charges, left Fairburn with him on June 17, when Cook "forced" her to accompany him on an extended trip out west, threatening her life if she refused. After they had gone together to Birmingham and from there to Los Angeles and other western cities, they returned to Birmingham, according to the girl, where Cook left her and came back to Fairburn with the intention of returning to Birmingham and continuing their tour.

While a nation-wide search was being made for the pair, F. A. Purmort, father of the girl, swore out a warrant for Cook, charging kidnaping after witnesses had said they saw the two board a train at Tyrone, a station near Fairburn.

Cook Is Reindicted.

On Cook's return, he was arrested on the kidnaping warrant, but the case was dismissed at commitment trial, July 12, because of lack of prosecution. However, on August 9 Cook was reindicted on the charge of kidnaping by the Campbell county grand jury and a charge of irregularity in banking activities in connection with the failure of the Bank of Campbell county, of which he was a director, also was made against him by the same jury.

In addition to the two state charges, Cook was bound over to federal district court by United States Commissioner W. C. Carter on a charge of alleged violation of the Mann white slave act. He posted bond of $1,000 in the federal case.

While on the western trip, Cook and Miss Purmort, according to the girl's statement, traveled as man and wife. The Fairburn banker, she said, offered to buy her pretty clothes and other luxuries, which, she claimed, she refused, leaving Fairburn with Cook only because he "threatened her life."

After their return to Birmingham, and Cook's subsequent departure for Fairburn, the girl, according to her testimony, remained in the Alabama city until she was called home to testify against Cook.

8-Inch Rain Falls At Thomasville In Twenty Hours

25-Mile Wind and Heavy Downpours Establish New Records.

Thomasville, Ga., September 15.—(Special.)—From 10 o'clock last night to 6 o'clock tonight, the rainfall for Thomasville as officially given out by the weather bureau is eight inches. There is no record of such a rainfall since the establishment of the bureau here, and with the rain still falling Manager Hadley, of the bureau, says there will be considerably more before it stops. The velocity of the wind is 25 miles an hour.

Thomasville seems to have caught the central portion of the gulf storm, Mr. Hadley stated.

The precedent is broken at last. That election year for business is bum. That nervous feeling is a thing of the past. Just hear the industrial wheels hum! Rejoice with The Atlanta Constitution.

MYSTERY CLOAKS SLAYING OF GIRL IN JERSEY TOWN

Pistol Bullet Found Near Horribly Mutilated Body. Girl Missing Since September 12.

Kingston, N. J., September 15.—A steel-jacketed .32 caliber revolver bullet is the sole clue with which detectives are trying to solve the murder of 15-year-old Elizabeth Johnson, the daughter of a prosperous farmer of Aqueduct, near here, whose horribly mutilated body was found by a caretaker on the grounds of St. Joseph's college on the bank of Lake Carnegie.

Beneath the body was a copy of a Philadelphia newspaper dated August 12, which was the date upon which Elizabeth was last seen at her home. Decomposition had so reduced the girl's flesh that identification was possible only by means of bits of jewelry and shreds of her clothing, which remained unchanged.

Through Elizabeth's left temple a bullet had crashed its way. The body was atrociously mutilated.

Advanced for Age.

The murdered girl was pretty and far in advance of her 15 years, both mentally and physically, according to her father, Joseph A. Johnson, who visited the New Brunswick morgue and identified the body.

It was just two years ago, on September 16, 1922, that the bodies of Dr. Edward W. Hall, pastor of a New Brunswick church, and a pretty singer in his choir, Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills, were found under a crab apple tree just outside New Brunswick.

A guard of state troopers has been placed over the spot where Elizabeth Johnson's body was found in order to prevent a repetition of the confusion of sightseers that is said to have obliterated important clues when thousands came to view the crab apple tree setting of the Hall-Mills murder.

Had Young Man Jailed.

Several months ago, Elizabeth is said to have made serious charges against a young man of the neighborhood, who was sentenced to six months in jail. He completed his service three several weeks ago.

According to country and village authorities, Elizabeth complained a short time before her disappearance that another young man was forcing his attentions on her. It is believed that this man has left the neighborhood.

Detective Fred David, of Middlesex county, who is investigating the girl's death, said Monday that he was seeking a farm hand several years older than Elizabeth who, the girl's father had informed the investigator, had been carrying on a flirtation with his daughter. David hopes to question this man.

A member of David's staff denied that the man who was arrested on the complaint of Miss Johnson nearly a year ago is the person upon whom suspicion has fallen. It is believed that the detectives are seeking a local resident.

John Caserly, caretaker at St. Joseph's college, discovered Elizabeth's body Sunday. He was strolling along a scarcely used path that bordered a clump of bushes when he caught sight of it. It was not wholly concealed from casual gaze, but the spot is about 100 yards off the main road and the path which passes by it is so little used that it is overgrown with long grass and seedlings.

Coroner John D. Hubbard examined the body in the thicket where it was found and pronounced death to have been due to the bullet which had pierced the child's brain. The bit of metal was discovered after a search, lying on the ground.

ATTEMPT TO SLAY JAP POLICE HEAD FAILS, IS REPORT

Tokio, September 16.—(By The Associated Press.)—An attempt to assassinate Mayor General Koizumi, who commanded the gendarmes in Tokyo during the earthquake period in September, 1923, made at Asahigawa, Hokkaido, where Koizumi now commands the 14th brigade, failed.

According to the Asahigawa correspondent of the Chuang Shogyo, Taro Oishi fired a revolver at Koizumi but the shot missed the general. Oishi was arrested.

PRINCE AND MATE OCCUPY QUARTERS OF HOTEL SERVANTS

Bath, England, September 15.—A tired-looking, dusty couple arrived here at a local hotel late at night and asked for a room. The best the clerk could do, he said, was a servant's room in a basement.

The couple accepted gladly.

They did not sign the register until morning, when the clerk learned they were Prince Viggo, of Denmark, and his bride, formerly Miss Eleanor M. Green, of New York.

LABOR OF LEAGUE TO PREVENT WAR PROGRESSES FAST

Tentative Draft of Proposition Covering Sanctions May Be Submitted Today.

BRITISH DELEGATES SHOW SOME ALARM

Plan To Use Fleet as Sea Constable of World Stirs Too Much Enthusiasm on Continent.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Geneva, September 15.—With Foreign Minister Benes of Czechoslovakia presiding as a kind of imperial judge and conciliator, British and French representatives at the assembly of the League of Nations wrestled all of today with the problem of sanctions, which forms the gravest danger in the way of a general Geneva agreement and tonight both countries' delegations issued optimistic statements.

They said the vital issues under discussion seemed on the way toward a satisfactory solution.

Whether this general agreement will take the form of a resolution, a protocol, or a treaty, has not yet been decided, but this question has been relegated to second place, because of the proposal put forward today with all the force of France behind it, that every belligerent in the covenant of the League of Nations, which makes it possible for any country to engage in war, must be sealed effectively and hermetically.

To Amend Article 12.

The French propose that the provision in Article 12 of the covenant, whereby the nations agree not to resort to war until three months after an award by arbitrators or a report by the council of the league, be stricken from the covenant. This is in accordance with the French determination that any and all causes of war shall be submitted to pacific settlement by the world court, by specially appointed arbitrators or by the council of the league.

Although today's meeting was entirely private, it is understood that one of the most difficult points of the discussion was the question of just how Great Britain will come forward with assistance to the league when any state has been declared an aggressor.

The British delegation gives the impression of being somewhat alarmed over the elation engendered among the continental powers by Britain's implied engagement to throw her naval forces against a proclaimed aggressor and there has seemed to have been created on the part of the British representative a distinct tendency to shrink from any definite and specific commitments.

The efforts today largely were centered about clarifying Article 16 of the covenant. Paragraph 11, of this article reads:

"The council shall have the right to call upon any member of the league to furnish it with such information as it may require for the purpose of enabling it to carry out its functions."

MILK COMMISSION ORDERS SURVEY

To Bring Federal Expert Here To Cooperate With Dairymen in Improving Milk Supply.

While the newly created Atlanta Milk commission met in its first session Monday afternoon and laid plans for cooperating with local milk producers in improving the quality of milk sold here, and for a scientific survey of the milk situation during October, city council at the same time killed, by its adverse vote, the Duval ordinance to require pasteurization of milk before resale by milk dealers.

The action of council was a mere formality to dispose of the ordinance, definitely, as Alderman W. B. Duval, its author, had announced his intention of dropping it in deference to the new milk commission, which is to be permitted to initiate the next action taken on the milk situation.

A milk expert in the employ of the United States public health service is to be brought here next month to study the local milk situation "from the ground up," and to suggest to the commission and to dairymen and milk retailers methods of improving the quality of the product.

The spirit of the committee, it was declared, is to improve local conditions by cooperating with milk men in furnishing information and technical advice and training rather than by making and enforcing new regulations.

The pasteurization suggestion will be studied in connection with any other that the federal expert may make after his survey next month, it was stated.

T. J. Chastain, president of the Georgia Milk Producers' association, is chairman of the commission; Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs is secretary, and Dr. George Cook, baby specialist; A. S. Nance and J. W. Key, practical dairymen, are the other commissioners.

Broadway and Bowery Equal On Nudity by Court Decree

BY RODNEY F. DUTCHER.

New York, September 15.—"East side, west side, all around the town, There's not a single dancing girl who ever wears a gown. Heads are clothes on Broadway—a silken cord's a coat; The same thing on the Bowery shouldn't get a copper's goot."

Now that 19-year-old Cleo Vivian, who no speaks English, is back at her job as an Oriental dancer with the National Winter Garden Burlesque company on East Houston street, she may be able to master that parody on Al Smith's campaign song and sing it with the dance and in the very same costume that brought her into the court of Magistrate Louis D. Brodsky.

Judge Brodsky, in effect, sang it himself when Cleo was arraigned before him charged with "doing an immoral dance while immorally clad."

The magistrate has seen a few of the Broadway shows himself and when a patrolwoman, a patrolman and a detective showed him a pair of tiny silken panties, a narrow headed girdle and two sheet-metal breast plates and said that was what Cleo wore during her dance Sunday night in the third-rate East Houston street cabaret, he thought of some of the visions of nudity he'd paid fancy prices to see on the white way and decided the case on its merits then and there. Perhaps he gathered that the little performance down on the East side must have been pretty tame.

It was reported that two actresses who had been discharged from the show had tipped the police to Cleo's act. At any rate, Cleo had received four encores and was emerging from the wings for the fifth time when Policewoman Helen Thomas snaked her back and placed her under arrest, along with the manager of the show and the proprietor of the cabaret. All testified that Cleo had wigged so freely as to seriously endanger what little costume she had.

CHEERING ADVICES FROM FIVE STATES GIVEN COOLIDGE

Political Prophets of G. O. P. Predict Victory in California, New York, Maryland, Northwest.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.
Washington, September 15.—There was nothing blue about this Monday for President Coolidge, for he heard predictions of success in various states hitherto regarded as doubtful, from supporters who called at the white house.

Assuming these reports to be correct, the president has picked up a neat little bundle of 78 electoral votes to be added to his pile. His various visitors assured him that he would receive the following votes:

California, 13.
Maryland, 8.
New York, 45.
Oregon, 5.
Washington, 5.

May Be Branded as Bunk.

Of course the democrats may be expected to come forth Tuesday with a statement that this is all bunk—and it may be. Most political forecasts are. After the recent episode of the Maine elections, when republicans, expecting defeat, explained in advance that the result would mean nothing, and the democrats, expecting victory, explained to the contrary, nobody ought to take political forecasts very seriously. But political prophesying is an old habit that dies hard.

The outlook in New York was presented by Representative Fairchild, of that state, who predicted Coolidge would poll a popular vote equal to that of Harding four years ago. That democrats fear some such contingency, is evident from the unceasing efforts to force Al Smith into running for governor again. They haven't much hope of Davis carrying the state on his own, but they think Smith could save him.

Maryland Is Claimed.

Maryland was reported on by Senator Weller, republican, who went over in the Harding landslide four years ago. He gives the state to Coolidge on the assumption that while it is democratic in state elections, it is inclined to be republican in national contests, due to a block of independent voters numbering 30,000 to 40,000, which holds the balance of power. In this group are a large number of conservative business men who this year object to Bryan on the democratic ticket. Weller said Coolidge's attack on La Follette at Baltimore a week ago made him many votes among this class. La Follette is drawing mostly from Davis, he thinks.

Republicans are pushing their organization work and claim to have started a definite swing toward Coolidge within the last sixty days.

J. Grant Hinkle, secretary of state for Washington, brought Pacific coast intelligence in large optimistic chunks. He gives California, Oregon and Washington to the president. He heard plenty of La Follette talk out there, but regards it mostly as noise. He says conservative democrats are hopping over to Coolidge in order to keep things as they are at Washington.

TREAT RETIREMENT OF GEN. PERSHING IN ROUTINE MANNER

Washington, September 15.—General Pershing's retirement was treated in routine fashion in the issue of the daily army orders Monday, under date of September 13.

The order relative to Pershing, couched in the regular language, read: "By direction of the president, the retirement of General John J. Pershing, general of the armies, chief of staff, from active service on September 13, 1924, under the requirements of the act of congress approved June 30, 1882, is announced. General Pershing will proceed to his home. The travel directed is necessary in the military service."

Meanwhile the alarm had been spread by Pandora. Everybody came running, expecting to see at least a box constrictor.

Mrs. Tuggle suddenly became aware that her door was ajar, and moved to close it. She drew back quickly however when a far from calm voice warned her to wait until a snake was driven from under her half-dressed form. Mrs. Tuggle picked up a pistol from her bureau. It looked like death for the snake, when somebody ventured that it was only a "king snake," and anybody knows king snakes don't go around biting people.

The crowd dispersed, the snake was returned to the box and Mrs. Tuggle put away her gun and resumed her interrupted toilet.

Parents of nearly 2,500 truant Atlanta children of school age are in grave danger of paying an aggregate fine of $125,000 for their truancy, it was revealed Monday by M. E. Coleman, director of census and attendance for the school department.

Consolidation of first week enrollment in all schools, completed Monday afternoon, showed a total enrollment of 42,443 during the first week in regular day schools, instead of nearly 45,000 as anticipated, reports indicating an absence of 2,500, brought warning from the census director that after this week the state compulsory attendance law will be invoked strictly.

Cases will be made against parents and guardians of all children not enrolled in compliance with the law, he said, and courts will be appealed to for assessment of the maximum penalty provided by the law, which is $10 for each day of truancy for each child permitted to stay out of school by parent or guardian.

Warning from the attendance department followed announcement by Superintendent Willis A. Sutton that each of the 1,400 school teachers in the system had been instructed to act as an assistant truant officer.

"No cases will be made against parents who put their children in school without compulsion before the end of this week," said Mr. Coleman, "but if it is necessary to use compulsion the law will be invoked strictly and every effort will be made to see that the penalties are applied."

The law applies to all children between 6 and 16 years of age.

DAVIS DEFINITELY DECIDES TO FIGHT LA FOLLETTE PARTY

Straight Democratic Battle To Be Made Throughout Country in All States by National Ticket.

DAVIS' TRIP TO WEST IS ADMITTED SUCCESS

Battleground States Include Ohio, Indiana, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Nebraska, Colorado, Iowa.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.
Washington, September 15.—The week just past has been marked, on the part of the democratic candidate, with the adoption of a definite policy of fighting La Follette and condemning some of La Follette's platform.

This ends a question about strategy that has prevailed in some parts of the democratic organization ever since the opening of the campaign.

In the judgment of most observers, the manner in which Davis has concluded it is wise, not only from the point of view of geographical tactics, but in a broader sense.

In the beginning, it was held by some of the democratic managers that they should facilitate La Follette's chances of carrying the northwestern states. It is quite apparent that, as to several of those states, the La Follette vote plus the democratic vote would be greater than the Coolidge vote; and La Follette could be helped to take those states away from Coolidge by the adoption, on the part of the democrats, of a policy of not opposing or actively helping La Follette.

Would Hurt Democrats.

Other democratic leaders held this would be undignified and unworthy; that it would hurt the democrats in other parts of the country when it should become apparent, and that it would injure the party as a permanent institution if it should permit itself, without a fight, to run third in several western states. In the end, the decision has been made to take the broad way and make a straight democratic fight throughout the country. This will make some difference in La Follette's chances of carrying the northwestern states, although it still remains a fact that in some of these states, notably Wisconsin and Minnesota, the democrats have had for some time only a skeleton, and more or less moribund organization.

Obviously, in a campaign in which time is short and resources meager, the democrats will hardly waste their energies by trying to build up organizations in states where at present they have little or none, and which they have no reasonable chances of carrying. Mr. Davis' attack on La Follette means, however, that the democrats are not to restrain their fight to the limited objective of being able, with the aid of La Follette's strength, to throw the election into congress. The democratic fight is to be a country-wide one, with the objective of winning the election at the polls in November. If, nevertheless,

1924 Pandora Box Offers Big Shock To Hotel Guests

Maid Lifts Cover, But Does Not Stop for Second Look.

Essaying the role of Pandora, a chambermaid in the Marion hotel Monday morning caused more excitement than the mythical lady ever did. It seems that Pandora of mythology was entrusted with a box and was severely warned against lifting the cover. Of course, she opened it just for one little look out of one eye. And what happened? Trouble, trouble ever since.

This sepia-hued Pandora of Monday did the same thing, only she had not received a warning against opening the box, which was resting under the bed of a guest. She lifted the cover, however, and out crawled the sinuous body of a snake some two feet in length. Pandora screamed, executed a back flop that would have done credit to an acrobat, and then dashed madly down the hall. The snake fled in the opposite direction. He reached the door of Mrs. Velma Tuggle, of Villa Rica, Ga., who was hastily changing her gown. She had failed to completely close the door and the snake poked his nose into the room and came to rest.

Meanwhile the alarm had been spread by Pandora. Everybody came running, expecting to see at least a box constrictor.

Mrs. Tuggle suddenly became aware that her door was ajar, and moved to close it. She drew back quickly however when a far from calm voice warned her to wait until a snake was driven from under her half-dressed form. Mrs. Tuggle picked up a pistol from her bureau. Council Committee Appointed To Work For Aviation Field

DAVIS IS HEARD BY OVER 40,000 AT BIG BARBECUE

Launching Fight in Missouri, Democratic Nominee Declares This Is "Fighting Campaign."

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
East Wood Farm, Dunceon, Mo., September 15.—John W. Davis carried his fight for the presidency into the heart of agricultural Missouri today, attending a gigantic barbecue at the farm home here of Dr. Arthur W. Nelson, democratic candidate for governor, and opening the campaign in this state.

Mr. Davis told his thousands of hearers, grouped in a natural amphitheater in front of the Nelson home, that this was a "fighting campaign" and "we still make war."

The democratic presidential candidate had for an audience the greatest crowd ever gathered in rural Missouri and he remarked that it was the largest assembly that ever met in the open in governmental affairs.

Over 40,000 Present.

Joshua W. Barbee, democratic chairman, who was in charge of the celebration, estimated that between 40,000 and 50,000 persons were present. The vast crowd spread out over the expansive pastures surrounding the speakers to hear Mr. Davis and Dr. Nelson launch their Missouri campaigns. The voices of the speakers were carried distinctly to the edges of the assemblage through loud speakers.

Mr. Davis assailed "special privilege" and "corruption in office," denouncing Albert B. Fall, Harry M. Daugherty, Charles B. Forbes, Edwin Denby and others formerly connected with the republican administration.

"And now they tell us the old firm has been reorganized," said Mr. Davis. He asserted, however, that the republican party was under the same management, had the same board of directors and had merely had a "new general manager" for the past year.

"If the situation had been reversed," he said, "and it could not be, I don't think I could have done it."

Will Confer With County Committee, Recommend Site and Make Financial Arrangements.

Definite action to insure an aviation field for Atlanta in time to win designation as an air port on postal and military routes was assured by city council at its session Monday afternoon.

Councilman Carl C. Aven, Alderman J. L. Carpenter and Alder Oscar Williamson were appointed by Mayor Pro Tem I. N. Ragsdale as a special committee of three from the Fulton county commissioners of roads and revenues to select a site, make all financial arrangements necessary to obtain it, and prepare papers to put the project through in legal form at the next meeting of council on the first Monday in October.

The action was taken by unanimous vote on a resolution introduced by the members who were named on the special committee.

Committee Meeting Called.

Councilman Aven, as chairman, immediately called a conference of his committee for 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, at which Colonel Danforth, who is now in Montgomery, will explain in detail to the council committee just what is necessary to put Atlanta definitely on the aviation map and will inform the members as to progress that the county committee, working with him, has made.

A joint city-county meeting will be called at the earliest convenience of Commissioner Paul Etheridge, Commissioner Edwin F. Johnson and Commissioner Charles Turner, of the county board, to make definite arrangements for dividing the expense and to confer with owners of whatever tract of land should be selected for the field with a view to making definite arrangements for acquiring the property under terms that will meet the approval of government authorities.

Will Draft Ordinance.

The committee, with City Attorney James L. Mayson, will then draft a city ordinance in legal form ready for adoption by council.

Practically unanimous support for whatever resolution is drawn was declared to be assured.

Walter A. Sims has announced his support of the project and council leaders declared themselves assured that he would sign any reasonable ordinance adopted by council to secure the field.

Sites Tentatively Approved.

Before leaving Atlanta for a three-day trip to Montgomery, where his service airplane is parked, Colonel Danforth had given tentative approval to at least two sites for the aviation field. One being the large tract of land on Power's Ferry road, owned by the county and adjoining the county poor farm, and the other being near the city-owned Lakewood tract in contact with Colonel Danforth's property. Three other sites among nearly a score inspected by Colonel Danforth in company with members of the Fulton county commission, had been given tentative approval.

The council committee will inspect all three sites, probably Wednesday afternoon, Dr. Aven said, and if other sites are suggested, will inspect them in company with Colonel Danforth and the county committee, in an effort to select the best site available.

When several sites have been found that meet government requirements, the committee will enter into negotiations with the owners and select the one for which the most advantageous terms can be made, it was stated.

Organization Plans were completed and approved, and chairman of all subcommittees appointed at an enthusiastic meeting Monday night of the Atlanta general committee, which is in charge of arrangements for the Pan-American commercial congress, to be held in Atlanta October 1-4. The meeting, which was attended by nearly 100 prominent Atlantans, was held at the Ansley hotel.

JOHNSON FUNERAL TO BE HELD TODAY

Final tribute to Judge George E. Johnson, for 11 years judge of the recorder's court, who died Sunday night at his home, 302 Luckie street, will be paid at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes. Services will be conducted by Rev. Frederick Stevenson, pastor of the Buckhead Presbyterian church, and interment will be in Oakland cemetery.

Funeralbearers will be Frank F. Smith, Sam Crane, Robert A. Gordon, John W. Hollingsworth, John Corrigan and A. W. Callaway. Mayor Walter A. Sims, members of city council, members of the Pioneer Boys' club and members of the police department will form an honorary escort. Members of the Cherokee tribe, No. 1, Red Men, will have charge of services at the grave.

Lived Here Since 1865.

Judge Johnson had been a resident of Atlanta since 1865, and was well known in political, business and civic circles.

Judge Johnson's death followed an illness of several years. Early in the summer, feeling advice of physicians, he took a long vacation and appeared to be improved. However, he suffered a relapse soon after his return to Atlanta which necessitated an operation, and he was at death's door for several days. However, he again appeared to be on the road to recovery, only to suffer a second relapse that proved fatal.

He moved to Atlanta immediately after the civil war, and soon afterwards established a large candy factory. He later served as a member of the board of police commissioners for more than 20 years, and during that entire time, had the record of never having missed a meeting.

Council Pays Tribute.

Final tribute of friend and foe was paid Judge Johnson with bowed heads by the full membership of city council Monday afternoon, in adopting, by rising vote, a memorial resolution introduced by Councilmen J. A. Allen, Council and Frank Callaway.

A copy was ordered spread on the minutes of council and another transmitted to his family.

Officers of the Great Council of Red Men of Georgia will attend the funeral.

Office Records Assailed By Mayoralty Candidates

While Mayor Walter Sims charged in his campaign for reelection, with "playing both ends against the middle on every public question," Key and Alderman J. R. Bachman, his campaign manager, both centered their fire upon the mayor from the stage of the Milton Avenue school in the third ward as "the candidate of special privilege" and accused him of "shifting the burdens of government directly to the poor while big property owners, rich people, and corporations are allowed to go free."

Mayor Sims spoke to approximately 200 voters at the station school in the third ward and to an equal number at Georgia Avenue school in the second ward.

His Key's School Record.

After determining by unanimous show of hands that his audience believed in schools, the mayor said: "You believe in schools. Then you cannot vote for my opponent and be consistent. The man who is running against me is today attacking the source of revenue that is keeping the schools open—the water rate increase and the loan which I and others obtained. 'Yes, I do not again, but I can't play both ends against the middle all the time and get away with it. 'What would people think who come to our city if they found our children roaming the streets in idleness and our school yards grown up with grass? One reason why your present water rate has been increased was because Key took the bond money that had been voted to build the girls' high school, and put it into a high school for negroes. Yet he is running on his record, and if you vote for him you endorse his record."

He is one politician who sets his eyes to catch every breeze, and it is not from whence it blows."

Compares Budgets.

Comparing the present administration's budget with that of the latter term of Key's administration, the mayor quoted figures from the financial statement in the office of city comptroller to show that material savings—$102,000 in the department of purchasing agent—have been effected in nearly every department, except those of public health, public safety and schools.

"These three departments cost more," he said, "but I have no apology to offer for putting more money toward maintenance of health, enforcement of law and order, protection of life and limb, and education of your children."

Mayor Sims in both speeches described his part in providing Girls' High school, extending Lloyd street sewer, building McDonough road bridge, and paving numerous streets—improvements which the southside has obtained under his administration. Speaking of Lloyd street sewer, the mayor said: "The extension of this sewer has been an issue in every political campaign for the last twenty years. I said I had a part in getting rid of an issue that lasted so long."

Removal of Stockade.

He told third ward voters that removal of the city stockade to another site is one of the planks in his platform, and asserted that he intended to advocate it until the prison is removed.

Colonel Orrill Hall introduced the mayor at Station school. "I can't say he's the best mayor Atlanta ever had," asserted Colonel Hall, "because Jim Key says isn't the best, and as best is superlative, I'll have to content myself by saying our present mayor is a good mayor."

Today at 12:30 o'clock Mayor Sims will address the League of Women Voters at the Peacock cafe. Wednesday night at 8 o'clock he will speak in the Masonic hall at Dill and Stewart avenues in the tenth ward. Thursday night he will address voters of the fifth ward at Ponder's avenue and Marietta street and Friday night he will speak at Howell park in the seventh ward.

Assails Mayor Sims.

Former Mayor Key, after being introduced by Alderman Bachman as a "pioneer," declared and put forward rights of labor and the common people, waded into Mayor Sims as a candidate of what he termed the "privileged classes."

"The water rate is a tax directly on the poor in favor of the special privileged classes of the town, the large property owners, the rich people and the corporations," the candidate declared.

"His honor says the power company isn't supporting him but he is just against me," he continued. "It is against me? The only offense I have committed against the company is that I have been fair."

"The power company doesn't support anybody," he declared, and pointed briefly for effect. "They invest in candidates and they expect to get their money back with interest and then some."

Says Workers Get $25.

"They tell me the wage scale for Sims workers in this campaign has gone up to as much as $25 a day and if anyone is getting less than that for working for his honor, they are not getting what's coming to them."

"And let me tell you, the people have got to pay for all the money the power company spends this way; they've got to pay it in increased rates or depreciated service or depreciated wages."

The candidate referred in sarcastic vein to the mayor's record, remarking that he (Key) told how he would have financed schools had he been mayor in view of the general assembly's refusal to permit an emergency tax.

"Why didn't he ask me before he got into all that trouble," Key exclaimed. "I managed to finance them for four years and I could have told him some."

The Aviation Field.

The former mayor charged that the present rush to secure an aviation field with only a few weeks to get it done, was the chance of losing the aviation field, having been designated as an air port was due directly to lack of foresight on the part of the present administration.

"Why, one of the last things I did before I left office was to get government authorities to make a survey of this section, to pick out a field out on Brown's Mill road and actually make the first payment on it," the speaker asserted. "Apparently the present administration has let it go by default and now is scurrying around trying to remedy its mistake."

Key and Bachman both aimed shafts of satire at the mayor's charge that Key was responsible for building a negro high school with "beauty parlors and electric elevators" before building the high school for white girls.

Tells Why He Signed.

"The row over picking the site delayed the girls' high school, and I only signed the contracts that came before me while I was mayor," Key said. "The negro high school contract came before me, with the approval of the board of education, of which his honor was a member by my appointment, of the city council, of which he was a member, and of the bond commission and I signed it."

"But I only signed a contract for the building and if any beauty parlors or electric elevators went into it, they went in while his honor was sitting in the mayor's chair in city hall, or city in his friend Shumaker's office in the power company building across Fairlee street, he charged."

He ridiculed Sims' claim of credit for building two schools out of current revenues, charging that the mayor had not only vetoed the resolution to build the school, on the ground that it meant closing the schools, but had refused to sign the contracts after the resolution had been passed over his veto and then refused to sign checks for the work after the board of education had made the contract without his approval.

From Key campaign headquarters it was announced Monday that he would speak at Kirkwood school, Twelfth ward, tonight, at Georgia Avenue school, Second ward, Wednesday, at Heberham hall, in the Eighth ward, Thursday, at Hemphill and Tenth, Friday, Fifth ward, and at Crossing, Eleventh ward, Saturday.

Both candidates have been invited to speak at the League of Women Voters at luncheon in the Peacock cafe at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon.

DRIVER BOUND OVER TO STATE COURTS

J. Gay Brewster, 18-year-old jitney driver, of 30 Brown street, was bound over to the state courts on a charge of involuntary manslaughter at a hearing before Acting Recorder A. W. Callaway Monday afternoon.

Brewster, whose car ran down and killed I. T. Dahney, 32, of 11 Wall street, on the night of September 11, declared the accident was unavoidable. The prosecution maintained that Brewster was violating a state law in passing an intersecting street in excess of ten miles an hour. The jitney driver, who was previously under a bond of $1,000, was held in bond of $500 by order of Callaway.

Cobb Committee Meets.

"The Bob Cobb for council committee" will meet at the corner of Highland and Virginia avenues at 8 o'clock tonight to hear Mr. Cobb, candidate against Councilman C. D. Knight, of the ninth ward, review the campaign. Other candidates are invited to attend, it was announced Monday.

GIRLS' HIGH GETS AID FROM COUNCIL

City council pitched in Monday to help the school board get the new Girls' High school ready for occupancy by the 300 or more girls who will be knocking at its doors by the beginning of the next school term.

Two measures, one sponsored by Alderman W. B. Hartfield and looking toward grading the land immediately around the new building to prevent flooding the first floor, and the other by Councilman Carl C. Aven to prepare the streets and approaches leading to the school for the heavy traffic they will have to bear, both being adopted by unanimous vote of council.

$300 Is Transferred.

Alderman Hartfield, as member of the street committee from the third ward, secured a transfer of $300 of this ward street repair funds to the use of the city construction department in clearing earth and rock away from the sides of the school for a sufficient distance to give rain water some other outlet than through the windows and over the floors of the new building.

Councilman Aven, also of the third ward, secured passage of a resolution creating a special committee of five members, including the chief of construction and city comptroller, to prepare definite plans and specifications for grading and repaving the streets leading to the school and driveways leading from the streets to the school entrance and to draft ordinances necessary to put the work in motion.

Mayor Pro-Tem I. N. Ragsdale appointed Councilman Aven as chairman of the committee, with Councilman Leo Suderth, chairman of the council school committee, and T. Frank Callaway, with Chief of Construction William A. Hansell and Comptroller B. Graham West acting as ex-officio members, the first to advise how the work should be done, and the second to find the money to do it with.

May Need County Aid.

Councilman Aven said that conferences held previously with construction department officials, following a survey made by Chief Hansell himself, led to the belief that the city would not be able to finance the work this year without assistance from the county treasurer, and that the committee might ask a conference with the county commissioners.

Rosalie street, it was stated, may have to be graded down 12 to 15 feet and other streets cut down to conform with it.

WHEELER GATHERS
$10,000 FOR DRIVE

New York, September 15.—Pledging that if he and Senator La Follette were elected, persons mentioned in the Harding-Coolidge administration scandals would go to the penitentiary, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, independent nominee for the vice presidency tonight addressed a large gathering which contributed $10,000 to his and La Follette's campaign.

The speaker asserted that William J. Burns, as head of the detective force in the department of justice despite the fact that he had a $25,000 appropriation, was not allowed to detect errors in government departments.

If Senator La Follette and myself are elected, some of those names in the investigation of the Harding-Coolidge administration will go to the penitentiary," he said.

Mr. Wheeler told of the lack of money in the independent campaign and declared that persons throughout the country who are willing to associate themselves in the movement were being intimidated with social ostracism and being politically intimidated and that economic pressure was being brought to bear to defeat the independent candidate.

He stated that corruption in the department of justice was particularly grave because that department had the power of appointing federal district attorneys and other federal officials. He charged that the corruption in Washington was a direct result of the corruption method of nominating candidates for the presidency and added that Senator La Follette was pledged to a direct primary for president.

Mertis Shanks, Merrimac, will teach next year. Sixteen Mary Schroeder will teach sociology and social work in the Mt. St. Joseph college of Dubuque, Ia. Helen Haswell is to be assistant to the student pastor of the First Congregational church, Madison.

Use of the checkbook as a conductor of the auditory nerve, coupled with the amplification of speech, is reported to be the secret of a new telephone for the deaf.

U. S. Tax Burden Mounting Higher, Statistics Show

New York, September 15.—The American tax burden was $755,000,000 higher in 1923 than in 1922, and probably will be still higher for 1924, according to the results of research made public here by the National Industrial Conference board.

Approximately one-eighth of the national income now goes to the support of the government, where one-sixteenth sufficed before the war. Total taxes raised in 1923 were $7,716,000,000, against $6,961,000,000 in the preceding year.

Taxation by federal, state and local governments has risen more than $5,500,000,000 in the past ten years.

State and local tax burdens are increasing in proportion to federal taxes. In 1921, the former represented one-half of the total tax bill; in 1923, it had risen to 58 per cent.

"It is an unquestioned fact," says the board, "that the burden of taxation on industry, using this term in its widest sense, measured in terms of dollars, is three and one-half times as high as before the war, and measured in terms of comparative purchasing power, this burden is two and one-half times as high as it was in 1923."

From 1890 to 1913, taxes dropped from 7.2 per cent of the national income to 6.4, in keeping with a world-wide tendency of national wealth and income to grow faster than the tax burden. But after the war, the tax proportion was chronicled as follows: 1919, 12.1 per cent; 1921, 16.7; 1922, 12.1, and 1923, 11.6 per cent.

"Because the recession of national income in 1924 is likely to be appreciable as compared with 1923," says the report, "and in view of the continued rise in the volume of state and local taxation, it is highly probable that the ratio of taxes to income will be higher in 1924 than in the preceding year."

25-Year Lease
For Lakewood
Is Authorized

A program of permanent improvement for Lakewood park was made possible by council Monday in adopting an ordinance to permit the leasing of the park property to the Southern Fair association for 25 years, instead of five years as was the rule before the general assembly amended the charter to extend the time last summer.

With a 25-year lease, members of council stated, the Lakewood lessees can afford to spend the money to construct a large permanent outdoor stadium for civic events and entertainments, such as the light opera company which was agitated last year. A short-term lease, it was claimed, would mean considerable investment in a bad business risk.

The ordinance was adopted by unanimous vote.

SENTENCE OF LIFE
FOR LEOPOLD, LOEB
SUITS MRS. FRANKS

Chicago, September 15.—Mrs. Jacob Franks, mother of the slain Robert Franks, did not want Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, the confessed murderers, sentenced to hang and is satisfied with Judge John R. Caverly's sentence of life imprisonment, her husband said today at the state's attorney's office.

"I am satisfied with it also, but partly because it satisfies my wife," Mr. Franks said, when he called to discuss plans for the distribution of the $50,000 reward offered by himself and Chief of Police Collins for the conviction of the slayers.

Booze-Pajama Party Aired In Gotham Divorce Court

FORMER FOLLIES BEAUTY IS CENTRAL FIGURE

New York, September 15.—Midday cocktails, highballs that went far into the night and a sprinkling of pajamas, twin beds, all-night parties and the like, helped to keep the customers awake in Supreme Court Justice Levy's court when the hearing began of the suit of Courtland H. Young, middle-aged magazine publisher, to remove his three-year-old daughter, Rosabelle, from the custody of his 22-year-old wife.

Mrs. Young formerly was Dorothy Campbell of the Follies.

Fred Powell, a negro, who admitted ability as an "expert cocktail mixer," told the court that in June, 1923, Mrs. Young was one of a party of four at Shore Acres, the Long Island estate of William J. Jackson, secretary of the Ajax Rubber company, according to Powell.

The "expert" wouldn't even guess how often the four paid tribute to his cocktail artistry at luncheon. It was often enough, he intimated, and left every one feeling jovial.

After lunch there were Scotch highballs for Dot, who was Mrs. Young, and Simmons in a large and comfortable porch swing. Nothing much happened after that, according to Powell, because Dot and Simmons just stayed there drinking until long after Jackson and Miss Johnson had gone to bed.

When the party finally quieted down Powell made a tour of the house and found two bedrooms occupied, he told the court. He served three highballs in one room, the bedrooms and was received by that gentleman in his pajamas, but saw no one else in the room.

There were twin beds there, he said, and he didn't look under them nor did he yank open the door of the adjoining bath room, which was closed.

Mrs. Victoria Eichner, from whom Mrs. Young rented an apartment until last week, testified that she put Mrs. Young, her mother and Rosabelle out of the place after the last of a series of wild parties, during which Rosabelle played around the halls by herself until well after midnight.

None of Mrs. Young's witnesses have yet been heard.

German Cabinet
In Full Accord
Over Guilt Note

Berlin, September 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—A semi-official statement was issued tonight saying that all cabinet members are in complete agreement regarding the question of war guilt and Germany's entry into the league of nations.

Both questions, according to this statement, will be dealt with thoroughly on September 23, when President Ebert is expected to preside at a cabinet meeting.

A cabinet meeting was held today, presided over by Chancellor Marx. At its conclusion Chancellor Marx and Foreign Minister Stresemann conferred at length on the subject of war guilt, and an official announcement was made later that "no difference exists between the chancellor and foreign minister."

The statement added that the negotiations between Dr. Stresemann and Dr. Oscar Hergt, leader of the nationalist party, before the Reichstag voted on the bills for making the Dawes plan effective, had the full approval of the chancellor and the entire cabinet.

Thomasville, Ga., September 15.—(Special.)—The new Georgia law requiring couples who contemplate matrimony to post their intentions five days ahead of time in order to obtain a license, and then answer a questionnaire, does not seem to worry the young people of Thomas county, who do not care to have their plans made public. They get into a car and go across the Florida line. There they find a justice of the peace or the ordinary, and get the knot tied without any preliminary program.

Several couples from Thomasville went to Monticello, Fla., last week and were married by Judge Bird, ordinary.

"Few couples seem to care to have the notice of their coming marriage posted up for the idle to gaze at and comment upon, and in consequence many Georgia couples come to Florida for the tying of the nuptial knot," Florida officials say.

HEAVY CASUALTIES IN CHINESE BATTLE

London, September 15.—An all-day battle Monday between rival Chinese forces in the Lihao sector outside Shanghai, is reported in Shanghai dispatches to the Central News.

The fighting began at 3 a. m. Monday and was continuing at a late hour. Heavy casualties on both sides were reported.

Meanwhile, Hong Kong dispatches report an ominous move on the part of Sun Yat Sen president of South China, who has left Canton for Shikwan, in the Manchurian frontier.

Shikwan is in the very heart of northern danger zone, and it is presumed that Dr. Sun has gone there in connection with his expedition against the north on behalf of Lu Yung Hsiang, rebel leader, who is now active in the Shanghai area.

Numerous other small battles are still being fought in the Huangpu district, 15 miles from Shanghai. The Chi Hsiang Hsiang forces are making every effort to capture the port before Chang Tso Lin, leading his Manchurian forces, advances further southward.

SUN HANDS CANTON OVER TO PEOPLE.
London, September 15.—President Sun Yat Sen of South China, has issued a manifesto, handing over the city of Canton and the province of Kwang-Tung to the Chinese people for self-government, according to a Shanghai dispatch to the Daily Express.

It is believed that Dr. Sun will join General Chang Iso Lin, Manchurian war lord, who is advancing on Peking, in order to overthrow the northern government of President Tsao Kuo.

NORTH CHINA OUTLOOK DARKER THAN EVER.
Tientsin, September 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—The war outlook in northern China today was blacker than ever.

The Chihli troops of Wu Pei Fu, ruling military power in Peking, continued throughout the day to move toward the eastern end of the great wall at Shanhaikuan, while reliable reports were received here that the Peking-Mukden railway had been cut on the Manchurian side of the wall.

Chihli troops passing through Tientsin today on their way north were fully equipped. Artillery formed a part of the equipment, and several airplanes were observed. A Tientsin firm, it is understood, is supplying General Wu's soldiers with gas masks.

Foreigners at Peking, a popular summer resort near the coast 22 miles from Shan Haikuan, have been advised by Chinese officials to return as soon as possible to Tientsin. If the expected clash between the Chihli forces and the Manchurians develops, it probably will start near Shanhaikuan.

DAVIS IS HEARD BY OVER 40,000

believe anyone would say that the democratic party should not be held to account. You can't wash out the record of a political party by some individual arising and say his conscience is free of any wrongdoing. You must hold a party to strict accountability for the things done."

Not Even "Pictorial" Farmer.
The audience included thousands of farmers and the democratic standard-bearer, smilingly admitted at the outset of his address that he was "not a farmer," not a dirt farmer, not even a pictorial farmer.

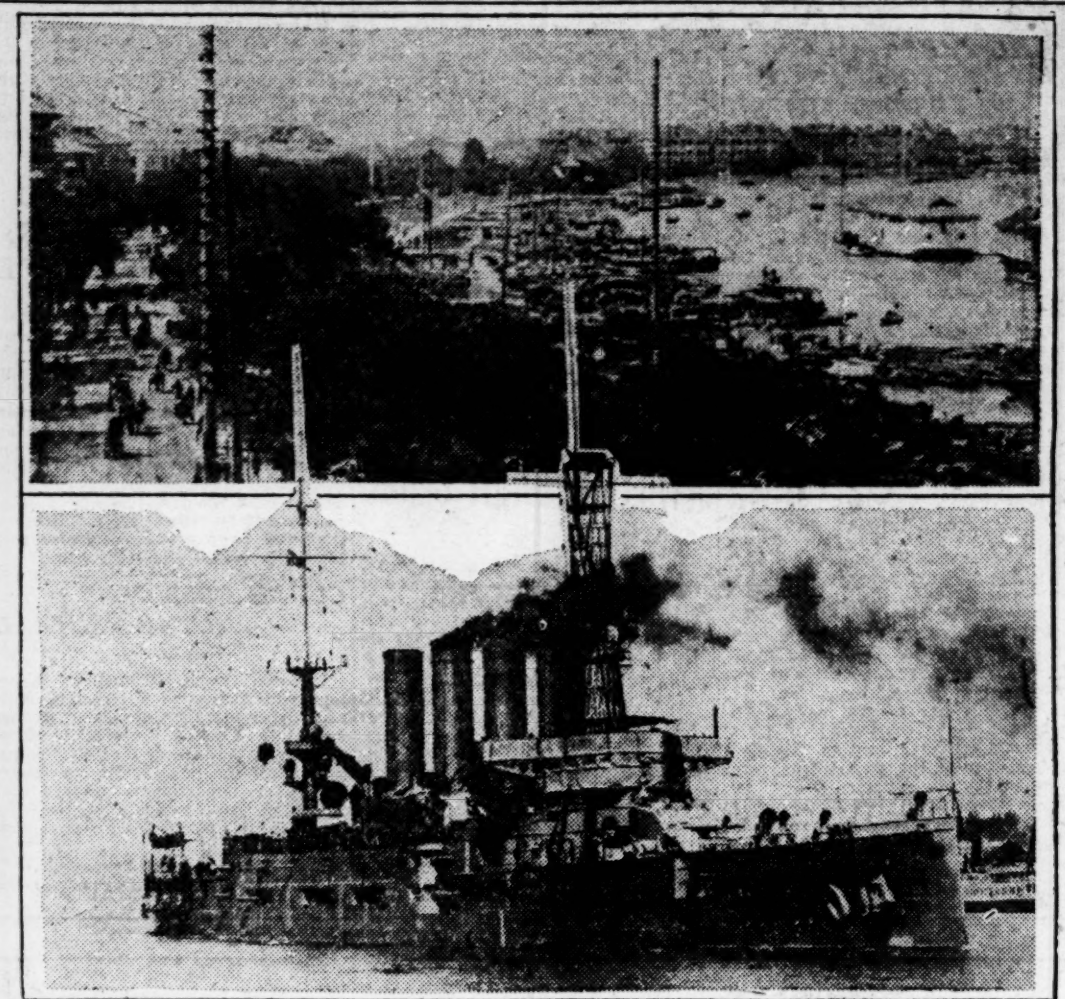

Mr. Davis said the farmer did not ask for special privilege, but that they might stand equal before the law, commanding the respect and attention in congress and the white house that had "too long been granted to other industries."

"The republican party has never recognized farming as an industry," he declared amid applause. "It wrings one's heart to hear of strong and sturdy men, whose years of life and labor have gone for naught, and who stand evicted from the soil they had bedewed with their honest sweat. And it stirs one's impulse to search out relief for such conditions and to apply such remedies—if remedies there be—as the power of government may devise."

Three Remedies of G. O. P.
"There have been just three things put forward by the candidates of the republican party: "First, that the farmer shall help himself. Physician, heal thyself," is their prescription. "If remedies there be—as the power of government may devise."

"What is the second remedy? Why

U. S. Forces Guard Foreign Lives in China War Area

American warships and marines are aiding forces of other nations in guarding the lives and property of foreigners in the area around Shanghai, where rival Chinese armies are battling for possession of the city. Here is a view of the American and English quarter in Shanghai and (below) a photo of the U. S. S. Huron, one of the gunboats on duty in the troubled section.

the second remedy is that the farmer has been working too hard. He has been too industrious, in his enterprise he has brought too much land into cultivation—he must cut down. With hungry mouths all over the world, the farmer must turn his corn fields into weed patches, empty his irrigation ditches, and sit down to enjoy a life of luxurious ease and pleasure until better times come again.

"And what is the third remedy that emanates from this quarter? We must appoint a commission to investigate it. If there is in this audience any farmer who feels that he has not been sufficiently investigated; if he will give me his name and address, I will see that the process is begun without delay. But the great trouble in this particular instance is that the patient is going to die before the doctors finish their diagnosis."

Tribute to Champ Clark.
Mr. Davis paid a tribute to the memory of statesman whom Missouri has contributed to the service of the nation. In particular, he mentioned the late Champ Clark, referring to him "as one of the ablest debaters of his day, a constant and effective advocate of democratic doctrines, the pride of his followers and the terror of his foes."

The presidential candidate took occasion to note that a bond of sympathy exists between West Virginia and Missouri and that both states have nominated women for the office of secretary of state. Speaking of the place of women in government, he said:

"We democrats have long since ceased to think of women as playing a different role or possessing different interests or aiming at different ends in the political world from the men of the nation. In the great field of government, there have been no questions interesting women in which men should not feel an equal concern, and no questions appealing to even which should not arouse the equal interest of women. Our ideal is an exact and equal partnership with all the men and women of the nation working side by side for the common welfare of themselves and their posterity. There can be neither diversity nor conflict in their interests and the nation needs now and always the strength given by their joint endeavors."

Call of Fellow Citizens.
In conclusion, Mr. Davis said that once more he heard his fellow citizens calling for the democratic party to give them equal rights for all, common honesty, common courage and a government that will function under leaders that will lead.

A shower late in the afternoon, just as the program was concluded, cast a shadow on what had been a perfect setting for the monster celebration. As the meeting broke up, the visitors scurried for their motor cars and within a few minutes the roads leading from the farms were crowded with vehicles.

Mr. Davis and party arrived at Eastwood Farm soon after noon, coming from Kansas City. At Syracuse, a small railroad station four miles from the farm, the democratic standard-bearer was met by Dr. Nelson and escorted to the scene of the barbecue, which was in progress at the time. Cheering throngs left the tables in the open to line the lane, leading from the farm gate to the house.

CHICAGO RECEIVES U. S. WORLD FLIERS

Arms of the crowd which had swept its police cordon aside, it was a spectacle of rejoicing.

Demonstrative Outburst.
All along the Lake Michigan shore, in Grant park and Chicago's business district, over which the three planes first circled, the outburst was as demonstrative.

The flight of 294 miles was without incident. That, with the emotion which the ceremonies in their honor visibly brought out, put them in a mood much as does a circus inspire frolicking boys.

"We have been treated royally wherever we stopped on our trip, but I want you all to know that nowhere—Tokio, Paris, London, Boston, anywhere—have we been greeted as we have in Chicago. I am proud to have flown the ship named after your city."

These were almost the first words spoken by Lieutenant Smith when he and his companions received the newspapermen.

Lieutenant Smith's ship, carrying the name "Chicago" over land and water where airplanes at some places never before had been seen, was literally fondled by the citizens who claim its name as home. Because of this feature, outside of the usual courtesy of permitting the flight command to land first, Chicago felt exceptionally proud in receiving Lieutenant Smith and his mechanician, Lieutenant Leslie P. Arnold. The unfortunate loss of Lieutenant Wade's original Boston in North Atlantic waters deprived him of being the first of the fliers to bring his plane into the city of its naming.

After a parade about the field to allow all to get a glimpse of the fliers, they were taken to an adjacent suburb, where they had luncheon "in peace." At every turn it was necessary to protect them with a squad of policemen or a corps of motorcycle officers. They were escorted between hangars by burly guards. During the two and a half hours' absence from the field, the throngs lingered, waiting for another peek when the officers returned.

As the fliers passed the speedway hospital, many of the afflicted war veterans there attempted to give them an ovation. The attempt was acknowledged by the fliers rising in their seats.

When the cars returned to the main hangar, the fliers again were cheered and a pathway made through the crowd to the office of the field manager for their interview with newspapermen. Police were compelled to use force to let them through.

Answer Roll Call.
Such recent having become almost as much business as successfully making their flights, the fliers and their mechanicians good naturedly lined up on a stairway and answered roll call as their names were called by a member of the reception committee, who wanted to "check up."

"All right boys, shoot," led off Lieutenant Smith.

The planes stood up under the grind from Dayton so well that such adjustments as were necessary were mostly perfunctory, shortly before 3 o'clock, in their "going out" uniforms, the six airmen again waded through humanity into their cars for a sight-seeing trip of Chicago, to place a wreath on Washington's monument near the art institute on Michigan boulevard, and for the public dinner at a fashionable hotel.

There each member of the squadron received in engraved words the appreciation and affection Chicago attempted to show in her display today. The Chicago Association of Commerce, speaking for its citizenship, acclaimed them as "the super-worthy bearers of your country's flag" and "gallant representatives of the army, whose traditions of self-sacrificing service are enriched by your unfaltering courage."

Birdmen Praised to Skies.
"Chicago welcomes and speeds to the moment of complete victory the indomitable navigators of the skies who will forever precede all other men in a globe-encircling flight; who bring to their own United States the conquerors' assurance that man is master of the air as he has long been master of land and sea," read the engraved parchment, one of which, signed by Mayor Dever, was presented each of the fliers.

The marvelous pioneering feat which we celebrate marks the birth of a new epoch in world history. It is the logical sequence of an invention which we nationally claim as our own. Devised by fellow countrymen, it has been your privilege to demonstrate its possibilities by skill and courage and daringly untried. The cycle is nearly completed."

Other gifts were a silver cigarette case for each and a gold model of the globe, showing the fliers circling it. The latter was presented by Charles M. Dickinson, who, at his more than three score and ten years, uses the air plane for his travels.

A brief acknowledgment of the remembrances was made by each of the fliers. As Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the air service, had said, his boys "were fliers, not speech-makers," and none was requested to make an extended talk.

Circle Over Tri-Cities.
An official army escort of eight airplanes from Chanute field at Rantoul, Ill., which arrived early at the air mail field, took off for the east when the world fliers were reported about 75 miles from Chicago. Meeting them in northern Indiana, they trailed the visiting ships until they landed at Maywood.

The highboys have 3,450 air miles ahead of them before they reach Seattle, Washington, the termination of their long flight is reached.

The only deviation from the airway course tomorrow will be made at Davenport, Iowa, where, at the request of Ralph W. Cram, managing editor of the Davenport Democrat-Speaker for the citizens of the tri-cities of Davenport, Moline and Rock Island, Ill., the fliers will circle, and by their circling, pay signal honor to those below. They plan to fly over the mail field at Iowa City also. Lieutenant Smith said, then pass on over Des Moines and over the regular air mail lane into Omaha.

LABOR OF LEAGUE PROGRESSES FAST

article says the council shall recommend what military, naval or air forces the members of the league shall contribute to the armed nation which will be used to protect the league covenant. This suggestion of a recommendation is hardly satisfactory to France which wants something more definite and stronger.

Today's negotiations also took note of the possibility that a number of states might not sign the compulsory arbitration clause of the world court of justice and hence of the urgent necessity of providing for some certain settlement of disputes through the council of the league or through a special board of arbitration.

So far were the negotiations advanced today that Dr. Benes, with the approval of Great Britain and France, expects to submit a draft of the instrument tomorrow to a meeting of the subcommittee of the disarmament commission.

Lord Parmoor said tonight: "There seems to be every hope that the proposals which Premier MacDonald and Herriot sketched out when they came to Geneva will be put into concrete shape."

To Probe German Armament.
A French delegate said: "The keynote of everything is the covenant. The world court by itself is insufficient. We are sticking by the covenant and clarifying it, so that war may effectually be outlawed."

Constructive work in another direction was performed when the permanent league commission on military, naval and air matters, reached an agreement as to the system of control of German armaments, which will probably be launched by the League of Nations when the inter-allied board has completed its task and the time comes to transfer the whole question to the League of Nations.

Investigation of the armaments in Germany is authorized by the treaty of Versailles and the league's military commission has drafted a detailed project of investigation and control at the request of the council of the league.

tween the ages of 7 and 14 years. Attendance in private school or under a private tutor or illness attested by a physician's certificate are the only excuses for failure to attend public school which are customarily accepted. Other reasons for failure to attend are considered each on its own merits.

Parents who permitted their children to remain out of school during the first week are subject under the law to a fine of $10 for each child for each of the first school days or $50 in all for the first week for each child. Those who permit children to remain out of school all the present week are subject to a $50 additional fine, or $100 for each child.

Little Excuse for Truancy.
"With free textbooks being supplied by the city to all grades through the sixth little excuse remains even to the poorest of families for denying their children the education which the city provides for them without cost and the state law requires them to accept," Mr. Coleman declared.

Enrollment for the first week, as tabulated Monday, showed 26,712 pupils in the white grammar schools, 2,783 in the white high schools, or 29,495 white pupils; 11,639 in negro grammar schools and 1,642 in negro junior and senior high schools, or 13,281 negroes in all, making the grand total for the week of 42,776.

Night school and special school enrollment for classes beginning next Monday is expected to boost the total by at least 5,000 and the roundup of children of school age not now in school to add another 2,500, making a total by the time of peak enrollment of the term of approximately 50,000.

DAVIS WILL FIGHT LA FOLLETTE PARTY

less, the election is thrown into confusion by the carrying of a sufficient number of states by La Follette, that is a condition the democrats will meet when and if it arises.

Davis' Speeches Successful.
Last week's action . . . Davis will end a tentative disposition that existed in some western states for the election of democrats and local La Follette followers to cooperate and make a mutual division of territory.

The testimony is universal that Davis' speeches on his present western trip were very successful and the personal impression he made won him the allegiance of many whose position is such that they can lead considerable bodies of voters. The democrats believe that in his coming western speeches Davis will achieve a similar plane, and that the campaign will take on the color of a hard fight between Coolidge and Davis. To the extent that that happens, interest in La Follette and his capacity to get votes will tend to recede.

Here in Washington, there was made public yesterday a list of the states in which the fighting will be hottest and the outcome will be decisive. This list represents a consensus of information and judgment from both republican and democratic sources, and takes into account the possibility that one of these states, Iowa, may be carried by La Follette.

List of Fighting States.
This list of battleground states includes Ohio, Indiana, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Colorado, Nebraska and Iowa.

In the minds of those who have reduced the battleground to this comparatively small area, the frequently or occasionally doubtful states of New York and Kansas are assigned to Coolidge, while Missouri is assigned to Davis.

"Did you attend 'Scandals'?" he was asked.

"Did you see a dance performed similar to this?"

"Did the dancer wear more clothing than you see here?"

"No."

"Did you make an arrest?"

"No," answered McCarden, "because I wasn't told to make an arrest."

"Did Ann Pennington, the Morgan dancer or Gilda Gray wear any more clothing than Madame 'Cleo'?"

"Ann Pennington didn't. But I don't know about Gilda Gray or the Morgan dancers because I've never seen them."

The judge delivered his decision, declaring absolute moral equality all around the town.

"The question involved is whether or not the standard of morals prevailing on the east side is higher than at Forty-Second street and Broadway."

He said "Both localities are in the same city and the same code properly applies."

"For the official records I want to say that this dance is not innocent or immoral as alleged."

"The audience at any of the high-priced Broadway shows or cabarets would be disappointed if the star should appear in any more costume than has been submitted here as evidence."

"The Thief of Bagdad" Tops Ladder of Screen Artistry

Douglas Fairbanks, in "The Thief of Bagdad," opened an engagement at the Atlanta theater last night.

Now I know why movies were invented.

For 30 years the making of moving pictures has been progressing toward this. For 30 years it has moved forward, step by step, from the earliest days of the cinematograph. There have been high spots on the road, and there have been, we all know, dreary stretches of inanity. The long highway was worth it, however, no matter how intense the suffering has been as we watched some of the steps on the way, now that "The Thief" has come at the end.

As stated, there have been high spots. Other pictures have come to us with their magnificence, to thrill us and to make us marvel. Most of them have outdone those which preceded, some by a mere trifle of progress, others by a long stride forward. But none of the strides in the past, none of the advancement of the early days and none of the marvelous progress of recent times in the business, or industry, or art, or call it what you will, can compare with the jump from the previous best to this "Thief."

A New Fairbanks. For now there is no longer a question of what the motion picture effort is. Whatever it may mean in other productions, in "The Thief" it is art. It is a sufficient reason for all the work that has gone before.

The program, as is usual with picture programs, gives credit to a long list of technicians in the production. The author is Elton Thomas, the director, Raoul Walsh. But you know, if you have followed him in the past, that the picture is, beyond all else, Douglas Fairbanks. A finer and a more splendid Fairbanks than ever before. A Fairbanks immeasurably greater, even than the Fairbanks of "Robin Hood" and "The Musketeers."

In this fantastic journey to fairyland, on which Fairbanks carries you as you watch his picture, there is a flying carpet, a winged horse that gallops through the clouds, a magic talisman, fire-breathing dragons, walls of blazing fire, a cloak of invisibility, and other Arabian Nights impossibilities that bring back to life the dearest stories of childhood.

But in the picture they are not impossibilities. As you watch you live again the wonderful story of old Bagdad, and horses and carpets as flying machines seem perfectly natural. You laugh and thrill with triumph as Fairbanks sows the seeds which instantly spring into life as a mighty army of white-clad warriors, out of it does seem impossible, hardly extraordinary. You are so completely transported into the land of make-believe that the absurd seems the logical, the impossible the true and the dream becomes reality.

A Delightful Dream. And it is such a delightful dream! It is a dream of fairyland more beautiful than we have ever imagined. Seven follows scene of such perfect perfection to the end.

The actors—Well, Fairbanks is the villain, but still the villain of fairyland. And Anna May Wong is the Mongol slave of intrigue and trickery. The others? They are perfect parts of the perfect whole. There are djinns, and hermits, and witches, and fairies, princes and caliphs and dragons. And not a one violates the visions of their kind that you have seen in your imagination, but never before with your eyes.

The production of the picture at the Atlanta is marked by several innovations. The stage is set, before the picture begins, as a street in Bagdad and the Meuzin intones his morning prayer to Allah as the lights slowly dawn upon the scene. Then the picture starts and we are, in very truth, living on a street of Bagdad.

Turkish Band. There is an orchestra of 20 which plays a musical score that is almost as great an advance in its own sphere as the picture itself. It is an original composition by Mortimer Wilson and it carries the spirit of the fairy picture throughout, but never obtrudes upon the consciousness of the audience.

Then, to add to the atmosphere, there is a native Turkish band playing before the performance, during the intermission and for the exit. There are two men and a woman, and the instruments they play are beyond accidental knowledge as to names. But as the woman beats should be called a tom-tom if it isn't that. The girl ushers are dressed in eastern costumes—baggy pants, embroidered jackets, half veils and all.

Pass Turkish Coffee. And, during the intermission, these have maidens as Turkish coffee around to all among the audience who desire to taste. Real Turkish coffee—except that it is better than the stuff we drank in Alexandria 20 years ago.

But all these extra aids to atmosphere are unnecessary. They amuse and they are interesting. The picture is so good, however, to carry you in all sincerity away from Atlanta of the twentieth century and place you, in truth, in Bagdad of the fantastic future, where you are the prince, the villain, laugh at and love "The Thief."

It is here for the entire week. It ought to be here from now on, so that you need, however, to carry you to leave mere life and wander for awhile in the garden of joyful dreams.

RALPH T. JONES.

"The Side Show of Life." (At the Howard.)

A heart-stirring story, extraordinary acting, beautiful photography, capable direction and a circus and society setting combine to make "The Side Show of Life," the Paramount picture that opened at the Howard yesterday, unusual screen entertainment.

Ernest Torrence has realized one of the ambitions of his life. He has played the role of Petit Paton, the famous clown character of William Locke's novel, "The Mountebank," and he handles the part with remarkable skill. Enough cannot be said of Anna Q. Nilsson's work in this production, being her best ever offered.

"The Side Show of Life" is a picture of real interesting entertainment. The overture, under the direction of Ruel B. Risiger, presents "Song Reminiscences" for the prologue and an attractive offering under the heading of "The Music Box Revue" brought forth several rounds of applause. Other subjects and the comedies, "Bluffing Bluffers," went to make up the program.

"The Yankee Consul." (At Metropolitan.)

A laughing screen success came to town last evening when the newest of Douglas MacLean's productions, "The Yankee Consul," was presented at the Metropolitan theater. A large and enthusiastic audience laughed and laughed, the spontaneous humor of the film rocking the house.

MacLean hops, steps and jumps from one amusing scene to another with the personality and unusual pantomimic ability that have established him as a real screen star. He is ably assisted in his new story, which is chock full of laughs and thrills, by the charming Patsy Ruth Miller, who makes a most fascinating heroine.

The supposed Yankee Consul, to save the young girl who needs help, sends an SOS to the American navy—but there we go, giving away one of the big surprises of the picture. You must go and see it to appreciate what a genuine natural fun-maker this agreeable young MacLean is upon the screen. A "Will Rogers" comedy and Enrico Liede's musical program were splendid.

"Man Who Fights Alone." (At the Rialto.)

William Farnum and Charlie Chaudin unite their talents in one of the most notable screen programs the Rialto theater has shown in a long time, with "The Man Who Fights Alone," and the comedy, "One Arm." Farnum scores a tremendous success in his return to the silver sheet after a year's absence, and in his debut as a star for Paramount.

"The Man Who Fights Alone" is a drama of strong man, a fighter, a dreamer, one who fights his battles alone. His love for a woman brings him to invalidism, a cripple, and it is his restoration to health through the tremendous punch to the story.

Man or Monkey Problem Puzzles Vaudeville House

Is Tarzan man or monkey? That will be the big question among those who go to Loew's Grand theater this week for the last act in which Tarzan, the man-monkey, is presented by Felix Pappy the branch train.

Tarzan walks like a monkey, looks like a monkey and therefore you say he must be a monkey, but then the stunts he does are so clever that you begin to believe Tarzan is not a monkey but a human being. However, every one must form his own opinion for the act closes with the secret unveiled.

Baker and Rogers, eccentric comedians, carried off the honors when it came to bringing the laughs, for these two were called again and again to respond to their encores. Their offering was just the foolish kind of comedy that always goes over big, and Baker and Rogers carried it over just a little bit bigger.

Marriage vs. Divorce was a very laughable sketch with George Usher in the role of husband. There is a little bit of humor to make every-tongue end out all right, but in the main the sketch is just comedy and it brings many a laugh.

Rialto and Farnum certainly know how to play a concertina, while one of them is quite efficient also on the piano-accompaniment. They combine these two to make some very pretty music, and also a very good act.

Robert de Peron & Co. present a real strong man act with the exception that one of the trio is a woman who has a right to boast a bit about her strength.

Tom Mix is starred in a different kind of photoplay to play in which he is foreman of an old lady's home. However, Mix comes through in great order with just as many or more Mixian stunts than ever.

CLARK BOOTH.

FIVE GOOD ACTS OFFERED FORSYTH THEATER PATRONS

Five good acts, two of them exceptional in merit, compose the new bill which opened at the Forsyth Monday.

Monday night's audience nominated Irving Edwards, in "Just Young and Careless," for first place. He tells a joke in such a fashion that you become convinced he gets as much fun out of it as you do. He sings a song as if he enjoyed it, instead of merely gets paid for it, and he is blessed with plenty of looks to win the bobbed part of the audience. And he certainly does know how to wear his clothes.

The Rubleville Comedy Four, a quartette of males, disguised as citizens of the most rural town in the United States, also received a vote of thanks from Monday night's audience. A splendid selection of the kind of songs real quartettes always sing, interspersed with good comedy lines, go to make the act what it is today.

Lester and Stuart offer a song and dance act that was as good as anybody could ask. The act is full of fun, new melodies, eccentric dances and clever burlesque. Danny Gramma, a clever male dancer, made an act, and one of the best of its kind in the city. A splendid selection of the kind of songs real quartettes always sing, interspersed with good comedy lines, go to make the act what it is today.

Miss Edith King, cast as "Mamie," was another of the participants traveling in strange surroundings, so far as her career in Atlanta is concerned. She has a very good deal of such ability, and the Lyric troupe lead was thoroughly and gracefully accomplished.

Will Lloyd and Gus Forbes were one comedy they got over Monday night was impromptu, we'd all like to see them when they have put in a few hours of practice.

LOY WARWICK.

LYRIC OFFERING IS ENTERTAINING START TO FINISH

Lyric theatergoers are thoroughly familiar with Wilfred Lyell in many roles. If this correspondent's memory isn't playing him strange tricks, Lyric patrons have seen the Lyric's leading man cast as a prince of the realm and they've seen him slip into the hay-covered garb of a country bumpkin.

Last night they found him set up as a whisky-runner, something as far different from his usual characterization as overall is from proper dinner attire, for he was Dan Marchion in "Zander the Great." Dan isn't the softest article on earth, nor is the portrayal of the role one that could fall into the classification of simple. The splendid manner in which he carried it off is only additional proof that the play doesn't exist that can't be done and done well, by the organization that has been assembled at the Lyric.

"Zander the Great" proved entertaining from start to finish despite the fact that what threatened to be the big climax was reached at the conclusion of the first act. Happily, it was only one of the many ten moments in the comedy.

KNELL IS SOUNDED FOR STRAW LIDS; FALL HATS DUE

The hour of the straw lid has passed. Its day is over for another year while in its place the felt, the cloth, the plush and the velvet will reign supreme until roses bloom again.

Monday was the official last day of the reign of the straw hat. Today the man who wears one, does so at the peril and peril of his neck, as he is decked with the last remains of summer headgear. Gone their nattiness, shattered their proud emblems and their glory. Fall hats truly come.

CONDITIONS IN CHILE REPORTED TRANQUIL

Santiago, Chile, September 15.—Conditions throughout Chile are officially reported as tranquil, with no indication of agitation over the political upheaval and the assumption of governmental power by a military triumvirate.

The diplomatic corps met this evening and decided to send a communication to the new government, but the nature of this communication is not known.

The overthrow of the political government by the military has created another interesting situation as regards the present municipal governments, which are controlled by the politicians. It is thought possible that the military may apply the same methods in dealing with these as they did in the case of the old Chilean government.

EDWARDS IS DECLARED NOMINEE FROM FIRST

Statesboro, Ga., September 15.—Charles G. Edwards, of Savannah, was named the democratic nominee for congress here today at a meeting of the congressional executive committee, following his victory by popular vote at the democratic white primary in the first district held last Wednesday.

Mr. Edwards obtained a popular vote majority over his opponent, R. Lee Moore, incumbent.

The meeting early this afternoon was a very brief one, lasting less than 15 minutes. A. M. Deal, chairman, representing Bulloch county, presided. George Bird, of Candler; C. T. Guyton, of Effingham; B. E. Daniels, of Evans; and John G. Kennedy, from Chatham counties, attended. Others were represented by proxy.

Mr. Kennedy introduced a resolution to declare Mr. Edwards the democratic nominee. Brooks Simmons, representing Dr. J. O. Strickland, of Bryan county, proxy, moved its adoption and it was unanimously carried.

Mr. Edwards spoke briefly, expressing his thanks and outlining his objectives in congress. He then entertained the delegates at lunch. No committees were named.

The report from Evans county was the last one to be filed with the executive committee. It gave Edwards 715 and Moore 275. This brought Mr. Edwards total vote to 14,525 and Mr. Moore's to 10,331, thus giving Mr. Edwards a total majority popular vote of 4,194.

On the convention vote each receiving 18 votes.

Ginnings compared with 782 bales ginned to the same date last year, almost six times as much cotton having been ginned here in August as against that in the corresponding month of 1923. It is anticipated that September ginnings will show a similar increase.

U.S. Looks for Move To Settle
War Debts but Not Very Soon

Secretary Mellon Will Await Success of Dawes Plan Before Applying Pressure.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, September 15.—The United States is looking for a move from France toward settling her war debt to this country, as the result of recent hopeful developments in Europe and the favorable sentiment which is growing among officials of the French government and the people. The outlook for a future arrangement for France's obligations, amounting to nearly four billion dollars, is regarded here now as favorable.

There is no expectation, however, of any negotiations in the immediate future. These will await the progress of the Dawes plan for reparations settlement, promising economic restoration in Europe.

This is the attitude of this government, as outlined Monday by high officials of the treasury, who played down the idea that reports from abroad of debt settlement meant that negotiations were expected in the near future. It may be several months.

The plan of settlement formulated by Edward N. Hurley, member of the debt funding commission, has not yet been examined by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, it was said, but he expects to go over it in the next few days.

Wait on Dawes Plan. Secretary Mellon regards it as idle to outline any definite plan of settlement at this time, it was explained. He thinks that it might confuse the situation to introduce the debt question right away, until the Dawes plan has had a chance to prove itself.

SECOND VICTIM DIES

HOLDEN DENIES
HE PLANS TO RUN
AS INDEPENDENT

Athens, Ga., September 15.—(Special.)—Frank A. Holden, who was defeated by Judge C. H. Brand for congress from the Eighth district in the recent democratic primary, Sunday denied reports that he intends to run independently in the November general election.

"I noticed a news item in an Atlanta paper of Sunday," Mr. Holden stated, "whereas my name was mentioned with several others as a possible independent candidate in the November election.

"My race was a very close one, but I intend now, and always have intended, to abide by the result of the democratic primary, and to support all of its nominees.

"I never have entertained, and will not entertain now, any thoughts or suggestions of running as an independent candidate for congress."

THOMASVILLE MAN

This offer was made by Judge Hopkins at a meeting of the members of the chamber of commerce and other citizens to consider matters in connection with the building of the warehouse.

Many matters were discussed in regard to the building of the warehouse and a committee was appointed consisting of Roscoe Fleetwood, R. H. Wright and Eugene Williams to communicate with an experienced tobacco man from Kentucky, and take up the proposition in regard to the details of the business.

CROP OF ORANGES TO BREAK RECORD

Washington, September 15.—The commercial orange crop of Florida for shipment during the season of 1924-25 was forecast today by the United States department of agriculture at 13,400,000 boxes, or 1,000,000 boxes more than the shipments from the record crop of 1923-24. The commercial grapefruit forecast of 8,000,000 boxes for shipment also is a record and exceeds the shipments of 1923-24 by 600,000 boxes.

The orange crop is harvested from 70 per cent of the orange acreage and the grapefruit crop from 75 per cent of the grapefruit acreage. About 27 per cent of the orange acreage and 30 per cent of the grapefruit acreage now producing crops are in young bearing groves and these young groves will bear much heavier crops in the next year or two, the department says.

The case has been postponed three times, the second time because of the imminence of the primary election, in which many concerned in the case were interested, and today again because the defense counsel, Earl Camp, of Dublin, was physically unable to place the case on trial, and asked the continuance.

Bishop Ashot has decided to detach himself from the Armenian Orthodox church and to form an Armenian branch of the so-called living, or Red Church of Moscow.

U.S. Payroll Rule
Under Hot Fire
By Woman's League

Washington, September 15.—The national woman's party has decided to send a deputation to wait upon Comptroller General McCarl and the secretary of the interior, regarding the 'former's ruling that a married woman employed by the national government must sign her husband's name to the payroll in order to draw her pay check.'

Headquarters of the party announced today that the decision to send the deputation followed adverse action on a written protest sent to the interior secretary by Alice Paul, vice president of the organization, with a brief on the subject by Burnita Shelton Matthews, legal research secretary, in an effort to have the ruling reversed.

"The assistant secretary of the interior department, it was said, informed them 'definitely that the matter is closed and will not be reopened.'"

"When the national equal rights amendment is passed," said Miss Paul, "a woman will no longer be compelled to sign her husband's name in order to draw her salary, because no man is obliged to sign his wife's name in order to draw his."

She added that "for a long time it has been a sore point with many independent-minded women that they could not get passports to foreign countries in their maiden names."

Be on your guard
for signs of Pyorrhea

Just as the stability of a building is dependent upon its foundations, so healthy teeth depend upon healthy gums.

Bleeding gums are the first sign of Pyorrhea's approach. Then they begin to recede and the healthy pink color gives place to a pale, whitish tint. Soon the teeth are loosened, pus pockets form and drain disease-breeding poisons through the system.

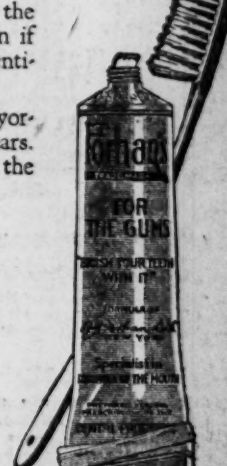

Forhan's For the Gums contains just the right proportion of Forhan's Astringent (as used by the dental profession) to neutralize oral poisons, and keep the gums in a firm, strong, healthy condition. Even if you don't care to discontinue your favorite dentifrice, at least start using Forhan's once a day.

Forhan's is more than a tooth paste; it checks Pyorrhea. Thousands have found it beneficial for years. For your own sake ask for and get Forhan's For the Gums. At all druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

NAVAL SECRETARY SENT HURRY CALL

San Diego, September 15.—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur is rushing back to Washington, following an urgent call from President Coolidge. The nature of the matter requiring Wilbur's immediate presence at the capitol has caused considerable speculation here, but remains shrouded in mystery.

It was first announced that the telegram received from Coolidge by Wilbur said:

"Demand your presence in Washington at once. Very serious."

After Secretary Wilbur had declared he did not know the nature of the emergency and as the district naval headquarters and the city of San Diego began to buzz with suppressed excitement, naval authorities Monday night corrected the wording of the Coolidge summons to read:

"Demand your presence in Washington at once. Important naval matter."

Secretary Wilbur left San Diego in a De Havilland plane piloted by Lieutenant Dan H. Wyatt. Ten other planes escorted him on his

ROOSEVELT IGNORANT OF REASON FOR CALL
Washington, September 15.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt told the United Press Monday night that he understood Secretary Wilbur had been sent for by President Coolidge, but he said he had no idea as to the reason for the sudden action.

The departmental matter in question relates to the naval budget estimates, saying that the interest consideration, it was said later. Secretary Slomp looked up the telegram which was sent Wilbur and said that it did not contain the phrase, "very serious," and merely requested Wilbur to return to Washington as soon as he could conveniently do so, in order to take up departmental matters that required his attention.

The summoning of Wilbur has nothing to do with foreign affairs, it was said later. Some thought that it might have to do with speeches which the secretary has been making on the Pacific coast during his present trip in which the Japanese question was discussed.

James Gould Schurman, U. S. minister to China, conferred with President Coolidge at the White House Monday, and this gave rise to the rumors regarding China. Schurman, however, playing down the importance of the revolution when he discussed the situation, saying that the interests of foreign nations there would not be disturbed.

Mrs. Wilbur, wife of the secretary, said she had heard from Secretary Wilbur regarding his return to the capitol. When the United Press dispatch was read to her, she said it was not what she had heard of his departure.

"I wrote Mr. Wilbur this afternoon," she said, "I expected him to return out of the blue, and I did not expect him back here until September 27."

J. D. Mize, 70, of 510 Confederate avenue, was seriously injured early Monday night when struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by Mrs. Emma K. McCormick, nurse at the United States veterans' hospital No. 48. Although his condition is serious, he probably will recover.

The accident happened when the aged man was crossing Duane street near Pryor street. Witnesses who reported the crash to Patrolman E. F. Davis stated it was unavoidable, and no case was made.

Mrs. McCormick carried Mr. Mize to Grady hospital and took him home after his injuries had been dressed. He suffered cuts about the head and face, severe bruising on the body and possible internal injuries.

The report listed the cost of gasoline and oil consumed by a private automobile, the price of food, hotel rooms and an item for 50 cents paid as toll for crossing a bridge. Under the head of contributions, he made this comment:

"None. Would not accept any if offered. Made no promise, no pledge and authorized no one to make any for me."

LEGION IN HONOR OF PERSON FAME
Boom Pershing
For Legion Chief
St. Paul, Minn., September 15.—A boom to make General John J. Pershing national commander of the American Legion, in annual convention here, was started tonight.

Who started the move, no one seemed to know, but the cry "We want Pershing for commander," rang through hotel lobbies and on the street wherever the "buddies" gathered.

Leaders of some delegations said they planned to get in touch with General Pershing to learn if he would accept the office.

LEGION IN HONOR OF PERSON FAME

St. Paul, Minn., September 15.—Marked by a simple, stirring tribute to the late Woodrow Wilson and a pledging anew of the union of the north and the south, the sixth annual convention of the American Legion opened its five-day convention today.

It was a solemn memorial service to the late war-time president that concluded the initial session, hushing the thousands of legionnaires who had been thrills into prolonged cheering as representatives of the blue and gray of Civil war days renewed allegiance to the union.

Before them had appeared in succession two nationally known veterans of the civil war, once enemy combatants, now clasped in the friendly arms of John R. Quinn, of California, national commander of the legion.

Through the large convention hall rang the strains of Dixie, the rebel yell sounded, and cheers alike for those two men echoed through the building.

Wilson Portrait Presented.
Then came a sudden hush. On the speaker's platform two veterans of the civil war, a large framed portrait of the man whose pronouncement had sent them to foreign battlefields—the war-time commander-in-chief of all America's forces.

"He was Virginia's finest contribution to the welfare of all mankind," said John Wicker, past commander of the department of Virginia, in presenting the portrait to the legion's national headquarters.

Reverently, the former soldiers stood, silent in their tribute, as a band struck up, slowly, the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner."

A garland of roses then was draped over the portrait by two members of the Virginia auxiliary, a woman sang "There Is No Death" and after a minute of silent prayer, a bugler sounded "taps."

Blue and Gray Join Hands.
Judge El Torrance, of Minneapolis, past commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, had praised the "courage and fighting qualities" of the Confederate soldiers. All bitterness of the Civil war now was gone, he said.

Then, as General W. B. Halstead, of Louisville, was presented as commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans, bands took up the stirring strains of "Dixie," and legionnaires turned toward the speaker.

When General Halstead had concluded, pointing to the complete union of the north and the south, former Governor S. R. Vansant, of Minnesota, past commander of the Grand Army of the Republic evoked further cheers by a tribute to the Confederate soldiers.

Quinn Cites Record.
It was a demonstration that afforded the legionnaires to unload some of the pent up enthusiasm that had been held closely in check throughout the session by the frequent use of Commander Quinn's gavel.

The commander, in his address, pointed to achievements of the past year as a fitting climax of five years of endeavor and said the accomplishments had doubled the prestige of the legion.

General Frank T. Hines, director of the veterans' bureau, told the legionnaires that the bureau "has been cleaned up" and asked their cooperation in making it a complete success.

Hardly more than a half hour after the convention adjourned at 1:30 p. m. until 9 a. m. tomorrow, the annual conventions of the American Legion auxiliary and the 40 and 8 societies got under way in separate convention halls.

Attention to Disabled.
It was indicated at the auxiliary gathering that the care and treatment of the disabled war veterans will continue to be the chief function of that organization.

In the keynote address Mrs. Franklin Lee Bishop, of Leicester, Mass., national auxiliary president, said:

"We all know the care of those who are still paying the price of war is not all that it might be and we feel that our greatest responsibility is to them."

China Civil War Is Called Bubble By U. S. Minister

Washington, September 15.—The present war in China was described to President Coolidge today by Jacob Gould Schurman, U. S. minister to China, as a "bubble on the surface of a deep and serious situation."

Mr. Schurman, who has returned to this country on his regular leave, declared the Shanghai battle represented merely a controversy of personal aggrandizement between the contending generals. It would run its course, he said, in a few months with only a deep gash, the second blow standing guard near the battleground.

More than half of the population of China, he estimated, has no knowledge or interest in the warfare.

HORSE NOT EXTINCT, SAYS HORSESHOER
Pittsburg, Pa., September 15.—In this day of fast cars and fast cars, the word optimum defined as "manifestly a horse shoe," C. H. Lippman, a village smithy of Cleveland, told his fellow workers who met for the 32d annual convention of the National Horse Shoers' protective association.

"Business could be better, but don't let it ever get into your head that the horse is becoming extinct," he said. "In many big cities horses are being used more and more for jobs requiring much strength, and on larger farms where the soil is soft, horses continue on the job."

Prince of Wales May Not Leave Until Saturday

Syosset, L. I., September 15.—The Prince of Wales is having such a good time on Long Island that he may postpone his departure from Thursday until Saturday, it is reported at the Burden estate.

Rumors are about the only thing emanating from the Burden mansion these days. H. R. H. is said to be displeased at the extensive publicity which has been given him, and his secretary, Captain Lascelles, passed up the daily interview he had been giving the correspondents on the "Syosset front." These interviews have often consisted of such lines as "All the news is in the morning papers."

In spite of the censorship exercised over the royal movements, the newspapermen obtained a fairly complete record of the prince's activities for the day. In the morning, he went to the polo field at Westbury and his team, in spite of the fact that his royal member exhibited the worst game he has shown here, won.

Miss Diana Guest, daughter of Captain Frederick Guest, expressed a great admiration for the prince, who she said was "a very nice fellow."

"You like the pony?" repeated H. R. H. with unprincely gesture. "It's yours."

In the afternoon, he went to Belmont Park and rode vigorously while Joseph E. Widener's Duetist crossed the tape to victory.

Wales was driven then to Garden City, where he was shown over the publishing plant of Doubleday, Page & Co. by Arthur Page, son of the late Walter Hines Page, whom the prince knew during Page's ambassadorship to England.

H. R. H. was one jump ahead of the newspapermen for a time during the evening, until they located him at a brilliant party at the Rodman Wanamaker home at Oyster Bay. This was expected to last until well into the morning.

Holdup Men Eat Hearty Suppers Before Robbery
Pope Kaffrars, proprietor of a restaurant at 153 Peters street, was robbed of $117 in cash when two white bandits entered his place of business about 11 o'clock Monday night, lined the proprietor and three regular customers against the wall, forced Kaffrars to hand over the contents of the cash register, and then, after terrifying the negroes into submission, marched Kaffrars around the block, releasing him at Fair street and Broadway alley.

According to the report made to Patrolmen J. F. Nance and G. B. Lee, the men entered the restaurant and ordered a meal. After eating, they approached the cash register as if to pay. Both then whipped out guns, one pointing a revolver at Kaffrars, while the other covered the negroes. Kaffrars was forced to hand the bandits both drawers of the cash register, and after emptying them, they threw them to the floor, forcing Kaffrars to accompany them around the block.

Failure to search Kaffrars' pockets cost the bandits approximately $100, and they also failed to rifle a small safe in which about $50 cash was kept.

The negroes in the place at the time gave their names as Robert Crawford, of 6 Kirk street, King Hanson, of 12 Haynes street, and Ernest Gates, of 29 Lowe's alley.

BERRY WILL HEAD LABOR COMMITTEE FOR DAVIS-BRYAN

New York, September 15.—Thomas J. Spella, director of the eastern campaign headquarters of the democratic national committee, announced tonight that Major George L. Berry, of Tennessee, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union, has agreed to organize and head a committee of labor men to assist the Davis-Bryan ticket.

HEADQUARTERS BUSY UPON TOUR OF DAVIS

Chicago, September 15.—Plans for the democratic invasion of Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and a return engagement for John W. Davis, the democratic presidential nominee, in New York state, were to the fore today in western headquarters here as final preparation were made for Mr. Davis' first campaign address in Chicago, scheduled for next Thursday evening.

Lincoln Dixon, western manager of the democratic forces, has come to regard the region between the Mississippi river and the Allegheny range as the "pivotal battleground" of the campaign, he asserted, and, accordingly, is giving careful attention to an outline of tentative plans for the continuation of the Davis tour next week.

accomplish its purpose—that of bettering trade relations between the United States and all Latin-American nations—and all pledged their efforts to make the congress an unqualified success from every standpoint.

Mr. Gress, who is assistant attorney general of Georgia, and president of the Atlanta Foreign Trade club, expressed a reprobated optimism in his address. "The success of the meeting already is assured," he stated, and it is fitting that the convention, which promises to be the largest and most effective of its kind ever held, should be staged in Georgia, as this state will be one of the greatest beneficiaries from improved trade relations with South American countries. It is up to the people of Georgia to back the meeting, he said, and I am confident that this state will not fail to take the interest that other states of the union already have shown in the "project."

Among other speakers were Dr. Clarence J. Owens, president of the Southern Commercial congress, who is directing organization work and will preside over meetings of the congress next month; John W. Young, secretary of the Atlanta Manufacturing company; and N. Dominguez, who will leave room for South American as representative of the Ford Motor company, and who has consented to serve as chief interpreter on the official staff which will receive the distinguished South American delegates and diplomats.

Heflin Smith to Speak.
Among announcements of importance made at Monday night's meeting were those that Senator J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, and Senator E. D. Smith, senior senator from South Carolina, have accepted invitations to address the convention. Senator Heflin's subject will be "Alabama's Port Facilities in Relation to South American Commerce," and Senator Smith's address will deal with the same subject in relation to South Carolina.

A communication was received late Monday afternoon from Governor W. J. Fields, of Kentucky, submitting the list of 100 delegates commissioned by him to represent that state at the congress. Similar delegations already have been appointed in 16 other states and Governor Clifford Walker will appoint Georgia's official representatives this week.

In addition, practically all railroads of this section will send representatives of their freight and passenger divisions to confer regarding transportation to all points on the South Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico interested in Pan-American trade.

LA FOLLETTE MEN PLAN MONEY HUNT
New York, September 15.—New York supporters of the La Follette-Wheeler ticket assembled tonight at a banquet at the Hotel Astor with the object of raising substantial sums of money to assist in financing their national campaign.

Senator Wheeler, their vice presidential candidate, was called back from a speaking tour in the east to speak to the assemblage, and his efforts were backed up by talks from Robert M. La Follette, Jr., Zona Gale and J. A. H. Hopkins, former chairman of the committee of 48.

Senator Wheeler dealt exclusively with the prospects the independent ticket had for success, and he declared he had found these good even in New England and Pennsylvania.

"If the republican party has a reason for feeling safe in any part of the United States, it should be in New England," he asserted. "Yet it is not safe even for the New England candidate the republican party has nominated this year. Upstate New York is much like New England, and Pennsylvania offers another pleasing prospect."

Million-Dollar Boy Bandit

JEERS AT ATTORNEY AS THIRD TRIAL STARTS

Asks Parole for Guilty Plea

Chicago, September 15.—"Wee Willie" Dalton, the youngest bank robber who ever was able to steal a cold million in bonds, at last has been brought to trial again after having enjoyed three years of more or less unrestrained liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

In 1921 "Wee Willie," then 17 years old and full of the vigor of youth, thought he was working too hard for too little money as a messenger for the Northern Trust company of Chicago. So Dalton took about $1,000,000 worth of bonds that had been entrusted to him for delivery, and he fled to the south, where he was caught 24 hours later and at that time he had only about $500 left.

Twice juries have disagreed on whether he did or did not steal the bonds. Dalton has been able to hire good attorneys. He never has furnished either his former employers or the police with a satisfactory explanation of what he did with the bonds or of how the robbery was planned. Whenever he has been pressed for an explanation, Dalton always has changed the subject.

The technical charge against Dalton is embezzlement, but, as Willie says: "What do I care about that?" They haven't got anything on me and I guess this time that they'll give up trying to railroad me."

At the outset of his third trial Monday, Dalton made an offer to plead guilty if the state's attorney would agree to release him on parole.

"I'm willing to say that I did it, if they let me go," the young bandit explained. "But why should I get myself into a jam? If they let me out I'll be good and nobody ever will have any trouble with me again."

Assistant State's Attorney William McLaughlin is not wholly convinced that "Wee Willie" has not been living off some of the proceeds of his robbery or of some other robbery. Anyhow, he told the court he doesn't want to encourage young Dalton in a life of crime. So the trial goes on.

Zupke was arraigned shortly after Florence McKinney, 19, had entered a plea of not guilty to second-degree murder in connection with the same crime. SKIPPER REFUSES

TO LEAVE BRIDGE

FOR OPERATION

New York, September 15.—The story of a skipper who refused to leave the bridge of his ship even for an operation for appendicitis, was told today when the liner Scythia arrived here from Liverpool and Queenstown yesterday.

On the third day out from Boston on the last voyage, officers said, Captain Prothero developed an acute attack of appendicitis. He refused to leave his bridge even when physicians decided on an immediate operation and remained in his bridge cabin while Sir John Bland-Sutton, president of the royal college of surgeons, and one of the most eminent British authorities on surgery, who was a passenger, performed the operation, which was successful.

Among the passengers arriving today on the Scythia were Colonel Edward M. House and David W. Griffith, motion picture producer.

SHOOTING WOMEN

HAVE OPEN SEASON

AT NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, September 15.—Husbands and sweethearts have fared badly in New Orleans during the last week and two of the three women whose aim was accurate have been exterminated while the third is at liberty with a comparatively unimportant charge against her. A coroner's jury today decided that Mrs. Ida Deitz, 57, who shot and killed her husband at their home yesterday, was justified. She claimed he had attempted to beat her.

Miss Helen Von Dillon, 19, who shot her husband, Joseph Ritter, in Jefferson parish, a few hundred yards beyond the city limits, while tussling for possession of Ritter's pistol, was pronounced guilty by the coroner's jury. She reached the conclusion the death of Ritter was accidental.

Mrs. Lillian Imbomne, who shot her husband Wednesday night, is at liberty under $1,500 bail, but only on charge against her of "shooting and dangerously wounding." She told a story of years of abuse at the hands of Imbomne.

APACHE RAIDERS

SENT SCURRYING

BACK INTO MEXICO

Las Animas, N. M., September 15.—Cattlemen of this district who have been disturbed over raids on their herds for several days past, today saw relief in the scattering of a band of Apaches, who, it is understood, crossed the international boundary about 10 days ago and have been taking a living from the American livestock men.

It is understood that the band descended from the original Geronimo tribe and that they have been living in Mexico. A number of horses and articles of equipment captured by a posse indicated that the Indians were from south of the boundary, members of the posse said.

SEEK POSTPONEMENT

IN TRIAL OF FORBES

Chicago, September 15.—Arguments for a continuance in the trial of Colonel Charles F. Forbes and John W. Thompson, St. Louis and Chicago contractor, jointly indicted in connection with irregularities in the administration of the veterans' bureau, were presented before Federal Judge G. A. Carpenter today.

At the same time counsel for Thompson presented arguments in support of demurrers to two joint indictments charging conspiracy.

Former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, arguing for continuance until after the November elections, based his plea on the suggestion that the veterans' bureau administration under Colonel Forbes had become a political issue.

F. J. Stransky, arguing for the demurrer, challenged the indictments returned by a federal grand jury on the ground that they were "indefinite," uncertain, muddled and unintelligible.

James S. Easby-Smith, personal counsel for Forbes, while consenting to the argument for a postponement in the conspiracy indictment, indicated before the court that he would ask an early trial of Forbes of a separate indictment charging acceptance of a bribe.

PILOT KILLED BY FALL

AS BALLOON ESCAPES

Tiremont, Belgium, September 15.—During the inflation of a balloon here yesterday the mooring cable broke and the gas bag soared aloft bearing with it the pilot, Du Mortier, and his associate, an unidentified man. The pilot dropped from a height of 30 feet, struck on his head and was killed.

The associate clung to his perch and came down with the balloon near Diest. He was not seriously hurt.

New Legislature Composed

Of High Type of Citizens

With the exception of several counties which have not yet held their county primaries, the full list of members of the lower house of the Georgia general assembly for the session of 1925 has been tabulated by The Constitution.

Of the 206 members of the house, 122 of those listed here were not members of the legislature of 1923-24. Thus approximately three-fifths of the new house will be changed from the body just adjourned. Also, with but a few exceptions, the new members have never been elected to the assembly before.

Under the provisions of the biennial sessions bill, passed last summer and to be ratified as a constitutional amendment at the coming election in November, the new legislature will hold only one regular session in 1925—instead of annual sessions for the two years of its term as heretofore.

The advantage of the change has been demonstrated, state officials say, by the splendid type of men who have been chosen for the new legislative body. The reduction in demands upon these men is believed to be largely responsible.

WORLD BEAN KING

HAS DISAPPEARED

Albion, N. Y., September 15.—Lewis E. Sands, wholesale bean dealer and known as the "world's bean king," has vanished like his father did years ago. As a result of his disappearance, his wholesale plant here, doing business as Lewis E. Sands Company, Inc., and 28 receiving stations and warehouses in this state and scores of others throughout the country are idle in compliance with an order from his attorney. Liabilities of the company are said to exceed assets by $300,000 to $500,000.

Mr. Sands, philanthropist and churchman, Sands built up his business from small beginnings. When Henry Sands, father of Lewis, left Albion for parts unknown, his wife, two sons and two daughters were left to shift for themselves. The elder Sands had eked out a living by buying small lots of beans from nearby farmers and picking them over in a small barn.

Lewis Sands was 15 years old when his father left and the burden of supporting the family fell upon him. He chose to sort beans as his father had done. Within a few years he was an employer. He married Miss Mary Stevens, daughter of an Albion Methodist minister, and interested Wall Street capital in his business.

During the world war, Sands furnished beans for the allied armies and is said to have made more than a million dollars from these contracts. It is believed by friends that the strain of long devotion to business has affected his health. He was a director of many banks.

The Sands corporation has done an annual business of four or five million dollars.

Announcement of the closing was made by Sanford T. Church, attorney for Mr. Sands. He said no action had been taken toward bankruptcy, this depending on further examination of the books and meeting of creditors.

Large numbers of small towns and villages were entirely destroyed. Several communists stated that they had lived through as many as 17 pogroms.

STORM JACKIE COOGAN

London, September 15.—Exciting scenes were enacted outside of St. James palace today when several thousand persons, mostly women and children, in an effort to see Jackie Coogan, stormed the motor car in which the youthful actor had arrived for the purpose of seeing the palace guard changed.

Women fought with one another for positions in the motor car, and Jackie was extricated from the melee with difficulty by his father, who carried him on his shoulder into the palace from where they saw the guard changed.

There was a similar crush when the young actor returned to his car. Several policemen finally mounted the running board and escorted the car through the jam.

It fixed the date for the execution of Louise Thomas, a negress, convicted of murder in Philadelphia, for the hanging was beginning October 28. The last woman executed in Pennsylvania was Sarah J. White, who was hanged in 1880. Kate Edwards, convicted of murder in the first degree in 1905, was pardoned after more than twelve years, the various governors refusing to sign her death warrant.

GEORGE DUMONT SOLD TO MINNEAPOLIS FOR $7,500

Curve-Ball Artist Fourth Twirler Sold by Crackers; Kinnere Will Pitch Today

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

The fourth pitcher to be sold this year by the Atlanta Baseball club did out of his Cracker uniform for the last time Sunday in Chattanooga, it became known last night when President Dan Michaelore announced the sale of George Dumont, right-handed curve-ball artist.

Unlike Ray Francis, who goes to the Yankees, and Benny Karr, who went to the Cleveland Indians for major league berth, Dumont goes to the American association. He will pitch next year for Minneapolis.

Dumont was sold for a cash consideration of $7,500, with no strings attached to the deal.

Minneapolis is Dumont's home. It was hinted in connection with the sale that Michaelore sold Dumont to the club rather than wait for a major league offer largely on account of Dumont's own desire to get home.

Dumont on Way North.

Dumont was to leave the Crackers last night without taking part in the five-game series with Birmingham that opens today on the Baronal estate.

Sale of Dumont leaves the Crackers only one real first-string twirler. He is Hollis McLaughlin. Francis has not yet gone to New York, but will leave this week, Michaelore said.

The moving up of the regular Crackers of 1924 is giving Manager Bert Niehoff opportunities to send his prospective 1925 players into the game. Kinnere, a twirler obtained by the Crackers from the Toronto International league club, probably will start today's game in Birmingham. Michaelore said last night. It will be his first start since he joined the Atlanta club a couple of weeks ago.

Mann Good Fielder.

Johnny Mann, who finished the season with the Charlotte Sally league club, is working at intervals now, and is showing up like a million dollars, and promises to give Dutch Krehmeyer a warm race for shortstop next year if he picks up on his hitting. His fielding is great.

Bill Mahoney, Winston-Salem catcher, who came here to take the place of Martin Aubrey recalled by the Yankees last week, is working a little, but has not performed for Atlanta fans. Michaelore says he looks good.

U. S. Polo Team Favorite On Eve of Second Match

New York, September 15.—Battling against heavy odds, Great Britain's poloists, with a shifted lineup, will enter the second match of the international challenge cup series to-morrow at the Meadowbrook club, Westbury, in a determined attempt to check the Americans who galloped to an overwhelming victory in the first game Saturday.

The Americans are heavy favorites to win and thus retain possession of the historic trophy, despite the fact that they will play without Malcolm Stevenson, crack number 3, who suffered a slight concussion of the brain in a bad spill in the eighth chukker of Saturday's match. Stevenson's place will be taken by Robert E.

Strawbridge, Jr., of Philadelphia, who finished the first game at No. 3. Although one more victory for the United States will settle the question of polo supremacy between the two countries for another three years, the minimum interval now provided between series, a third contest will be played regardless of the outcome of tomorrow's encounter. It will take place Thursday, however, instead of Saturday, as originally scheduled, so that the tournament for the American open championship may get under way on the latter date.

Strawbridge Capable Sub.

Stevenson's loss breaks up America's formidable new "big four," but Strawbridge is looked upon as a capable substitute. He demonstrated Saturday he could fit in nicely with the main-spring of America's attack.

Tomorrow's game has taken on unexpected interest, in spite of expectation of another sweeping American triumph. Critical question, the ability of the Americans to continue the display of dazzling team work that smothered the British Saturday, with a new number 3 in the combination, while on the other hand, the challenges, with a lineup rebuilt around the spectacular Louis Lacey, may show marked improvement.

Lacey, outstanding figure of the first game, will have two new forwards to aid his attack. Lieutenant Colonel T. P. McNeill replacing Major T. W. Kirkwood at number 1, while Major G. H. Plimpton-Hornby has been substituted for Major F. B. Hurndall, former captain of the team, at number 2. Major E. G. Atkinson will remain at number 3, although it was first planned to put Hurndall in his place, while Lacey will stay at back.

Chicks Refuse Lamotte Offer

Cincinnati, September 15.—Negotiations between the Cincinnati Nationals and the Memphis club, of the Southern association, designed to bring Shortstop LaMotte to the Reds were suddenly terminated today by Memphis officials. The deal had almost been consummated when the minor league officials changed their mind about letting the shortstop come up to the big league, preferring to retain the player and assume the risk of having him drafted from them.

Evans Would Teach Coolidge

Washington, September 15.—Chick Evans, former national open and amateur golf champion, volunteered during a visit today with President Coolidge, to teach the chief executive the rudiments of golf. He received a promise that if Mr. Coolidge did take up the game he would call on Evans to teach him.

Favorites Are Victorious At Grand Circuit Races

Toledo, Ohio, September 15.—Favorites won in three of the four races on the opening day card of Toledo's second Grand Circuit meeting of the season here today.

Hollywood Frisco, driven by Will Crozier, the top-heavy favorite in the Elks' club trot, feature event of the day, had easy going and led the field home in each of the three heats.

Prince Loree, with Mike McDewitt in the sulky, had no trouble in winning the 2:00 pace. Henry Ford took the 2:15 pace in straight heats from a cheap field.

The only outsider of the day to capture a race was Sarah Thomas, with Stokes up. She won the 2:15 trot from Royal Harvester and Allworth, the favorites, by taking the second and third heats. Royal Harvester won the first heat.

Cara-Vola, a gifted child pianist, will be presented to the music lovers of Atlanta Tuesday evening at Phillips & Crew's hall at 8:15 o'clock.

This wonderful little artist has been studying only one year, and although her hand cannot span an octave, her technique might be envied by many an older player. She is so flower-like in appearance that she astounds her audience with the difficult program which she interprets.

Little Miss Cara-Vola is just beginning a concert tour in the south, and after six months more study will play a Mozart concerto with one of the leading orchestras of New York.

The Williston, S. C., paper speaks enthusiastically of her ability as a pianist. In Sunday's August Chronicle the following interesting criticism of her art appeared:

"Cara-Vola, seven-year-old musical prodigy, gave a splendid recital in Williston last night. Cara-Vola is a wonderful little pianist. She plays the most difficult pieces from memory. Taking music lessons only a year, she has begun to appear in concert in various cities of the south under the direction of Miss Adele Pettit.

The outstanding feature of her art is its absolute sincerity. In addition she possesses a warm, emotional nature, uniting remarkable technique with feminine delicacy. The intense interest and enthusiasm of the audience was a remarkable manifestation of their appreciation of her artistic sincerity and great ability. America will some day hear from and be proud of this little gifted musician."

No admission will be charged to-night. A voluntary contribution will be gratefully accepted for the exclusive use of the little artist's education.

Opening Dance
To Be Given
By Elks

Wayne Allen, chairman of the Elks' entertainment committee, announces that the opening dance of the fall and winter season will be given at the Elks' Home this evening from 9 to 12.

These dances are open to all Elks and their ladies, and visiting Elks are especially invited.

The dances given last season were of unusual interest and pleasure to the members, and the committee has promised that this season they will be even better than they were before. A number of features of entertainment in addition to the dancing have been planned, and one of the best dance orchestras in the city has been secured to render the music.

The Elks' dances were discontinued for the summer about two months ago and this will be the first dance given since the discontinuance. The Elks' social set is very eager for dancing to begin again, and it is expected that this dance will be very largely attended.

This is to prove a very exceptional year for Agnes Scott in respect to one student body. Never before have so many towns in the southern states been so greatly represented here; but the greater variety lies in the fact that an unusually number of northern and western, as well as foreign, states have sent students here this year.

Atlanta Chapter Red Cross Requests Christmas Bags

Atlanta chapter Red Cross is calling for Christmas bags to be made, filled and delivered at headquarters, corner Ivy and Baker streets, by September 25th.

These bags are to be made of bright-colored cretonne, 10x10 inches finished, with draw string at top, and filled with gifts suitable for men in service; nothing perishable; viz: games, playing cards, handkerchiefs, pocketknives, diaries, mechanical pencils, key rings with chains, puzzles, tobacco, tobacco pouches, pipes, cigarettes and cigarette cases, memorandum books, small story books, simple toys, etc. The more surprises the better. Candy in tin boxes may be sent. Nothing breakable.

The following letter to the Red Cross, one of a great many thanking the Red Cross for bags sent Christmas, 1922, was received from a member of company F, 11th Engineers, stationed in Panama:

"Coronel, C. Z., December 26, 1922. —District Chapter, American Red Cross, Washington, D. C.—To the Lady Who Packed My Bag: I want to express my thanks to the lady who sent the little cretonne bag that I received. It contained just the things that are very hard to get down here in Panama. To tell you that I was overjoyed with it is but saying a small part of what is in my mind. I am an old soldier, but it makes a lump come in my throat to think that back there in the homeland there is someone who thinks of the soldiers.

"It is the first Christmas gift that I have had given me for a long time, and it makes me feel as if I am a little fellow once more. Every package I opened gave me a thrill, for you know, a man may grow gray hairs and get hardened to the world, but he never grows up. He is always expectant—looking for something that never comes. Your thoughtfulness has placed a bright spot in the hearts of many soldiers this year, men who are used to having nothing but an army dinner to look forward to.

"May all of you women who are followers of that wonderful woman, Florence Nightingale, be blessed with happiness this Christmas tide.

"Wishing you all a prosperous New Year, I am, truly yours, (Signed) A. DERRYSHIRE, First Sergeant."

In order to get these bags to their destination before Christmas they must be at headquarters not later than September 25. Let Atlanta rally to the call of their Red Cross chapter now as in the past, and bring cheer to the men who are on duty far from home.

For the Autumn Season The Glorious New Silks Await Your Approval

'And approve you will, for no woman could resist the lure of the softly gleaming shades or the boldly brilliant hues of Autumn's new silks!

A Silken Exposition

Just for the enjoyment of all who will come we have spread with lavish hand a magnificent display of these new silks. The regal velvets—plain, brocade, Persian and entirely new fabrications are here. Some of the new silks to be seen are Cote de Cheval, satin Charmant, Minokrepe, Frost Crepe, Riviera Bane, Ombre Chiffon and a great many more.

New Woolens, Too

Along with the silks the autumn modes introduce some very beautiful new fabrics in woolens. Their very names express rare charm—Charmella, Kashmir-Kirmana, Kashmir-Benara, Fawnskin, Charminette, Jammuna, Charmeen, and beautiful serges and Poirer twills.

Quality and Price

Two notable features of our display will make themselves evident. The beauty of quality fabrics, none but the best, will be seen in every piece displayed. And, upon comparison, prices will invariably be found as low as real quality can be bought.

The Glove and Handkerchief Fair

Another Charming Display

America's best added to exquisite things from France, Belgium, Ireland and other countries make this display especially interesting to every woman who would be correctly gloved and kerchiefed for this autumn. There are novelties without end. Revelations of dainty loveliness will bring exclamations of delight at their modest pricings!

The Witches' club is an outstanding organization in the Atlanta federation and its benevolent work each year is of the most far-reaching character.

A coat of paint on the Eliza Manget Churches Home for Girls, after months of longing by the matron and the group of girls who make their home there, is the latest piece of helpful work, and further improvements at this home are contemplated by Mrs. W. A. Humphries, who is president of the club. The American Rescue Home, the Anti-Tuberculosis association and the Atlanta Child's home are among the many institutions which have profited largely many times by the sweet spirit of

The Luxury of Love

BY VIOLET DARE

XXVI.—Wealth's Poverty.

All her life Mary had wanted money, not because she cared so much for what it would buy in the way of material possessions, but because it had been brought up to look upon it as the one means of gaining complete freedom from worry and unhappiness. But now that she had plenty of it, she hated the things it bought her.

The beautiful appointments of her cabin, the wonderful garments that Vera Atwood had ordered for her from the various modistes who had the girl's measurements, the services of her quiet, competent maid—they became to Mary a bulwark between her and Bruce Gilliam.

She had always liked to look her best. Now she would have gone with her face unpowdered and her hair brushed straight back from her face and pinned up tight if her maid had not insisted on dressing it.

"But I don't care how I look," she protested impatiently, the morning after her talk with the serene little woman whose name she did not know. "What does it matter?"

"Everybody on board knows who made it," replied the maid, who she fitted white rumps to Mary's feet.

It is all very well to take a cure on shipboard and let one's complexion rest, of course, but certain things are just as important.

Mary subsided into her old indifference after all, why protest against anything? But the memory of the thought that had come to her as she sat on deck at daybreak came back to her, like the first rung of a ladder that might be the way out of the pit of depression in which she had been existing. Her unhappiness had been like a physical illness, a tangible thing that hurt her terribly. She felt that she knew how mothers must feel when their children die, as if she were one with all the grief of the world. Life without Bruce was more and more impossible.

But now, strangely enough, she felt more hopeful. The woman who spoke to her the day before had seemed so sure of what she was saying, so positive that one need not just go blundering through life at the mercy of whatever fate brought.

"Mathilde, is there a Bible anywhere among my things?" she demanded suddenly.

The maid was too well trained to show her surprise.

"Believe me, Mathilde," she replied, and presently brought out a small Bible, bound in pale gray kid, with a prayer book that matched it.

Mary smiled; they were as decorative through her mind, as she leaned back in her deck chair and watched the endless waves.

And Mrs. Harkness, having tried to be on intimate terms with her, went about utterly. "Tood had that Mary Hayward couldn't stand success, isn't it?" she commented to one acquaintance. "Marrying a title has quite turned her head—though"

There came to her a feeling of comfort.

She had to struggle along on nothing for so long that perhaps it isn't so surprising after all. And in her mind she looked forward to the day when she would even scores with Mary for the fancied slight.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Tells Mrs. Vogel's Terrible Suffering and how she was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan.—"My troubles were severe pains in my back and terrible bearing-down pains in my right side, also headaches and sleepless nights. I first began having troubles when I was 15, and they have increased as I grew older. A little booklet was left at my door, and I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women and decided to try it. After the first week I could go to sleep every night and I stopped having that nervous feeling and got a better appetite. The doctor had always said that an operation was the only thing that would help me, but I never had any faith in an operation. Since the Vegetable Compound has started helping me I do not suffer the severe pains, feel stronger, and am able to do my own work. I am more than glad to tell my friends that it helps where other medicines have failed."

—Mrs. GUS VOGEL, 6808 Pelouze St., Detroit, Michigan.

A record of fifty years service must convince women of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Red Riding Hood

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Morgan Schuyler advertises for a young woman to work in her apartment. The advertisement is answered by a girl, quiet but fashionably dressed, who is evidently a person of birth and breeding.

INSTALLMENT II.

Hope.

Mrs. Schuyler made a mental note of the use of the word post. It suggested that the applicant was English and it might explain much. The word seemed full of the daughters of English clergymen of excellent birth and minute incomes. Then she again looked at the caller and the theory perished. The daughters of impoverished English clergymen did not wear clothes like that!

"When could you begin?" she asked, still doubtful and overlooking one or two important details in her rising interest.

"Now, if you wish."

"You mean you could take off your hat and drop your coat and start right in?"

"I shall be glad to. I need more money and I must earn it as soon as I can."

"I suppose you're a Russian archduchess or something of the sort. They say New York teems with them."

For some reason this reminded the speaker that it was time to descend to solid ground and the matter of credentials. The applicant smiled again. The smile was charming, and the older woman, who also was addicted to smiles when life gave her an opportunity to indulge in them, smiled rosy in sympathy. But the stranger's next words sobered her.

"No, I'm no archduchess or princess or anything of that sort. But as you've been good enough to recognize me as above the position I'm seeking, I hope—for the first time the young voice faltered—"that you will take me on trust. You see, Mrs. Schuyler, I have no references!"

The big bed creaked under the weight with which its occupant limply sank down into it.

"Oh!" that lady exclaimed. And she added in the flat tones of bitter disillusionment, "I knew there was some catch in this thing!"

To the applicant the episode was over. She was convinced that she would not secure the position she had come for, and that she had received her cue for an immediate and dignified exit. But the expression of half-humorous distress on the pink face sulkily buried in the pink pillow, and looking more than ever like a crumpled pink cushion, was so appealing that quite unexpectedly she broke into a little laugh, soft and alluring. At the sound Mrs. Schuyler, who had closed both eyes under the shock of her disappointment, slowly opened them.

"I knew there was some catch in this thing."

"It isn't fair," the girl sympathetically conceded. "You see, I know all about you—every one does, of course. And I realize how safe you'd be here, and what a wonderful opportunity lies in working in your home. But Mrs. Schuyler—her voice grew urgent—"you know life and human nature, as few women do. You saw the instant I came in that I wasn't a servant. Can't you trust your instinct and my word, and accept me as somewhat unexplained, perhaps, but otherwise, all that I should be? I'm respectable—I really am! But there are reasons why I can't give anyone much information about myself. Won't you take a chance on me?"

Mrs. Morgan Schuyler sat up and punched her pillows into position that gave her the most comfort.

"What's your name?" I've proved that by the spasms I am optimistic, so we'll pursue this a little further," she ended with a large tolerance. "I can't even tell you that. I'll give you a name," the applicant hurried on, "but I'm not going to pretend that it's my own."

"How old are you?"

"That at least I can tell you. I'm twenty-four."

Mrs. Schuyler nodded.

"A good age. You're still young enough to be enthusiastic, but old enough to have some of the nonsense knocked out of you."

"I've had all the nonsense knocked out of me," the caller somberly submitted.

"I doubt it. There are unsuspected reservoirs of nonsense in every one of us. However, we'll see."

As if in unconscious response to the other's recent tribute, the formless pink mass in the bed was rapidly become an efficient, executive woman. Upon the round pink disc and through the round blue eyes suddenly appeared the personality of that Mrs. Morgan Schuyler, who was president of half a dozen important organizations, chairman of numerous public boards, noted welfare worker, and who, nevertheless, in the sanctuary of her own home, was alternately a perfect housekeeper and a hurt pink baby. Most of us have several personalities. Maud Schuyler had half a dozen.

"Sit down," she abruptly directed, in the tone of the chairman of the board of the Manhattan hospital.

The invitation was welcome. The caller had been standing for twenty minutes. She sat down promptly.

"Turn your face so that you're facing me and the light."

The girl obeyed.

"Now, what do you want to be called? One has to have some sort of a handle to get hold of you by," the speaker discontentedly ended.

"Margaret Black."

"Margaret might do. It's easy to remember. But why 'Black'?"

"It seems fitting and descriptive."

"M-m-m." The round blue eyes, with their new expression of alertness, stared unwinkingly at her through the big spectacle lenses.

"No, neither name is good," Mrs. Schuyler decided. "I never yet tied up to a lost cause, and I'm not going to begin now. My watchword is progress," she suddenly declaimed in the best platform manner of Mrs. Morgan Schuyler, the noted public speaker. As if recalled to the informality of the present occasion by a certain glint in the visitor's brown eyes, she went on in a tone more casual but no less assured.

"Answer one question. Have you been unfortunate?"

The girl flushed.

"Very," she admitted, "but not in the sense you mean."

"You're sure of that?"

"It's a matter one can be reasonably certain about, isn't it?"

Mrs. Schuyler glanced sharply at the speaker. Was this impertinence? But the girl's brown eyes, unusually beautiful eyes, by the way, looked straight back into hers with merely the little glint of tolerant understanding in them which had appeared there before. The older woman nodded.

"Yes," she conceded, "it is. You're not married."

"No, Mrs. Schuyler."

"But you're in some sort of trouble?"

"I am. It's nothing that will interfere with my work or position here, or in any way affect your household."

"I wish my brother, Bertie, was here to advise me. He goes straight to the heart of a situation, and I've never known him to be wrong. Talk about woman's intuition—"

The speaker had begun uncertainly, but now she stopped with an effect of decision. Mrs. Schuyler was not underserving of the tribute that had been offered her a few moments earlier in the interview. She did know men and women in life. And notwithstanding the knowledge she had gained in her journey half-way up the hill of life, or more possibly because of it, she was at heart a robust optimist and a believer in her kind, though she followed the modern tendency toward pessimistic expression. Also she had immense confidence in her own judgment. She decided to accept the statements of this stranger as the truth, and she revealed the decision in her next words.

"Whatever your trouble is, you're coming through it triumphantly," she predicted with sudden seriousness. "I've no idea of its nature, of course, but I've a strong feeling that it can't down you. So, if you don't mind, we'll give you a name that suggests what's expected of you. Shall we say 'Hope'?"

"Hope! It shall be," the girl agreed. "Have I any other name?"

"Not that I know of. I've rather exhausted my invention on the first. However, of course you must have something more to live up to—and, by the way, I'll lend you a few books that may help to change your point of view."

The memory of Mrs. Schuyler went forth like a dove from the literary ark and returned with a sprig of forget-me-not. "Emerson's a good name," she proclaimed. "I think we'll call you 'Hope Emerson.'"

VERSES AND REVERSES.

BY GEORGE S. CHAPPELL.

Holly-hocks and four o'clocks,
Mallow pink and larkspur blue,
Pansy, candy-tuft and phlox,
Salpiglossis, fever-few,
Lady's slippers, golden-glow,
Flowers of every form and look,
Every one by name I know,
When I see them . . . in the book.

A farmer's stock is cattle,
A broker's stock is not,
A merchant's stock is cloaks and suits.

Did you ever hear such rot?
Potatoes have a hundred eyes,
And yet they cannot see;
A needle is as blind with one.
It doesn't seem right to me!

What do you mean, O Moon so bright,
Gilding the mountain snows,
Sitting the mountain snows,

What do you whisper on the height?
Who knows? . . . Who knows? . . .
What does the south-wind sigh to the trees

As he passes swiftly by?
And what is the meaning of verses like these?
Who knows? . . . Not I.

New York, September 15.—The cotton market showed renewed weakness today with prices making new low ground for the movement under general selling. December broke to 21.45 or 75 points below the closing quotation of Saturday and closed at that figure the general market closing weak at net declines of 71 to 75 points.

The market opened barely steady at a decline of 13 to 29 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables, reports of clearing weather in the southeast, and assertions that eastern belt rains were helping late cotton. There were declines of 15 to 18 points from the lowest during the day on covering but trade buying failed to broaden, while the advance appeared to run into increased hedge selling by the southern market. The market weakened again in late trading, October sold off to 21.35 and January to 21.40, making net declines of 71 to 75 points on active months. Last prices were at the lowest.

Judging from comment accompanying the decline, local traders were inclined to believe that the rains recently reported in the south might have lowered grades, but would probably add to the size of the crop, particularly in the case of a late frost. The view apparently found encouragement in reports of continued hedging by the southwest. Some trade buying was reported in early decline, but broke off so far this season. Foreign markets were quiet, with cotton futures at 37.21, United States port stocks, 400,180.

AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, September 15.—The cotton market developed a decidedly weaker tone in today's trading and prices declined from start to finish with only a single rally worth noting which, however, did not hold. The depressing influences were weak Liverpool cables and the belief that the recent rains followed by fair weather in the west would add materially to the yield. There were both heavy speculative and hedge selling with only moderate trade buying to absorb the offerings.

The market opened 24 to 36 points down October at 21.40, December at 21.55 and January 21.75. Prices eased off steadily until near mid-session when October and December were 53 to 54 points below Saturday's close. A multiple rally of about 20 points then occurred on reports that the spot basis in the interior was hardening, but early in the afternoon prices weakened again and new lows for the day were made near the end with October, December and January 73 to 74 points below the previous close. The close was near the lowest showing net losses for the day of 68 to 73 points.

Although the weather map showed general and heavy rains in the eastern belt, it was practically dry in the central and western portions. The official forecast was for fair weather in the western half and showers in the east. Traders took the view that should fair weather follow the rains as seems probable the crop will be more benefited than hurt. The weakness of the afternoon was largely due to heavy selling by a big New York operator.

The census report showing consumption of lint cotton by domestic mills during August had no effect on the market.

New York, September 15.—The cotton market showed renewed weakness today with prices making new low ground for the movement under general selling. December broke to 21.45 or 75 points below the closing quotation of Saturday and closed at that figure the general market closing weak at net declines of 71 to 75 points.

The market opened barely steady at a decline of 13 to 29 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables, reports of clearing weather in the southeast, and assertions that eastern belt rains were helping late cotton. There were declines of 15 to 18 points from the lowest during the day on covering but trade buying failed to broaden, while the advance appeared to run into increased hedge selling by the southern market. The market weakened again in late trading, October sold off to 21.35 and January to 21.40, making net declines of 71 to 75 points on active months. Last prices were at the lowest.

Judging from comment accompanying the decline, local traders were inclined to believe that the rains recently reported in the south might have lowered grades, but would probably add to the size of the crop, particularly in the case of a late frost. The view apparently found encouragement in reports of continued hedging by the southwest. Some trade buying was reported in early decline, but broke off so far this season. Foreign markets were quiet, with cotton futures at 37.21, United States port stocks, 400,180.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.
New York, September 15.—Cotton, spot quiet; middling, 22.35.TONE WEAKER
AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, September 15.—The cotton market developed a decidedly weaker tone in today's trading and prices declined from start to finish with only a single rally worth noting which, however, did not hold. The depressing influences were weak Liverpool cables and the belief that the recent rains followed by fair weather in the west would add materially to the yield. There were both heavy speculative and hedge selling with only moderate trade buying to absorb the offerings.

The market opened 24 to 36 points down October at 21.40, December at 21.55 and January 21.75. Prices eased off steadily until near mid-session when October and December were 53 to 54 points below Saturday's close. A multiple rally of about 20 points then occurred on reports that the spot basis in the interior was hardening, but early in the afternoon prices weakened again and new lows for the day were made near the end with October, December and January 73 to 74 points below the previous close. The close was near the lowest showing net losses for the day of 68 to 73 points.

Although the weather map showed general and heavy rains in the eastern belt, it was practically dry in the central and western portions. The official forecast was for fair weather in the western half and showers in the east. Traders took the view that should fair weather follow the rains as seems probable the crop will be more benefited than hurt. The weakness of the afternoon was largely due to heavy selling by a big New York operator.

The census report showing consumption of lint cotton by domestic mills during August had no effect on the market.

ADDIE ADE'S ADVENTURES

The Minute-A-Day Serial

CHAPTER 9—"Well, what did you and young Mr. O'Kay find to talk about last night?" asked Ma, as Addie joined the rest of the family for her bacon and eggs next morning.

"Not too much," Addie said, yawning, and added with a laugh "finally we got around to the subject of your chickens."

"Pretty poor subject, there," put in Dad, biting into a hot biscuit and closing his eyes.

"That'll do!" admonished Ma, and turned to Addie, "Funny thing for a young man to start talking about when he's out calling."

"He didn't," said Addie, "but I did. You couldn't blame me. I bet neither of us had said anything for five minutes. You see, he's wonderful looking—and oh, wonderful—but whenever he gets a little embarrassed, he can't seem to keep the conversation going. We had talked about what a nice day it was and what pleasant weather we've been having, and I was afraid I'd have to advertise to find something else to talk about. And suddenly I remembered what a time you were having with your chickens."

"Your Ma gets a lot of conversation out of that topic," observed Dad, reaching for another biscuit.

"Here's just the point," Addie went on, "Jim—I mean Mr. O'Kay—made a good suggestion. Said you ought to feed your chickens some new kind of mash, and that you will find all kinds of feed and mash advertised any day in the Poultry and Supplies column of the paper."

"Humph!" said Ma approvingly, "seems like a very sensible young man."
